LINDBERGH AVOIDS REST UNDER STRAIN OF KIDNAPING CASE

Negotiations Are Kept Secret; Scribes At Distance

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 3.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh once stayed awake for thirty-three hours as he piloted a vibrant mass of metal and cloth across the treacherous air path of the Atlantic. This morning as the sun climbed above the Sourland mountains of New Jersey Lindbergh ended another thirty-three hour vigil.

When he landed in Paris he said that he had felt no strain but at times he had felt sleep. This morning the drawn lines of pain creasing his face and eyes that had looked for the first time on fear, told a mute tale of a terrific strain and of the desertion of sleep.

It was late Tuesday night when kidnapers raised a creaky ladder to the second floor of the white house on the hill top here. It was only a few moments later that Lindbergh found the crib of his baby deserted save for a note demanding ransom reported to be $50,000.

This morning despite the earnest efforts of the greatest man hunt ever known, the kidnapers alone held the secret of where their captive was, and sorrow and despair prompted the Lindberghs to build a wall of silence around themselves.

Rumor, wild reports, came from the house on the hill but when attempts were made to verify them Colonel Henry W. Breckenridge, spokesman for the family, waved them all away with a polite but final, "I'd rather not comment on that."

It was known however, if the word of a state trooper could be taken, that Lindbergh stopped his nervous pacing of the floor to utter grimly:

"The baby will be back in about twelve hours."

Again the wall of silence closed around the house of Lindbergh and two hundred newspapermen, representatives of many millions of sympathizers, were barred from the vicinity of the house and pushed back to a deadline which was drawn a mile away and guarded by state troopers.

All news would hereafter come from Tohn Toohy, secretary to Governor A. Harry Moore. But he was in his office at Trenton and that was fifteen miles from the Lindbergh house.

Consternation came with the realization that only a few hacks were available to transport the small army of writers and reporters to the state building. Puzzled New York or Philadelphia offices but the strain was too great and the overtaxed telephone system broke down with a dull sickening thud. It was more than an hour before outside communication could again be had.

Now came the long wait in the heavy rooms occupied by pleasant

TWELVE BEATEN IN CLASH OF MINERS

McARTHUR, O., March 3.—Twelve men were beaten and at least four were seriously injured today in a clash between 300 strikers and eighty non-union miners at the Thompson Coal Co. mine near Radcliffe.

The 300 strikers stormed the mine and attempted to force the non-strikers to join the union, authorities said. When the non-strikers refused, they were attacked by the union men, according to deputies.

Herbert Pierce, night watchman at the mine, was clubbed and seriously hurt. Deputies had to be called to disperse the crowd.

KROGER BELIEVES BUSINESS BETTER

CINCINNATI, O., March 3.—Indicating they believe business conditions are rapidly improving, officials of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co. today prepared to begin a new program of expansion.

Sixty new stores will be opened during the first six months of 1932, President Albert H. Morrill told stockholders yesterday.

It will not be an "orgy of expansion" such as was attempted in 1928, however, Morrill said. He declared a careful study of the locations of stores will be made.

ATHLETE STRICKEN

ATHENS, O., March 3.—Walter Williams of Cleveland, basketball and track star at Ohio University, was in a serious condition at Shetter Arms Hospital today from appendicitis. Williams, 23 years old and a senior, suffered a rupture of

DESCRIPTION

NEW YORK, Mar. 3.—A new and complete description of the kidnaped Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. was given out today.

These are the distinguishing characteristics of the baby:

He has a pronounced dimple in his chin.

When he hears a telephone, he attempts to take down the receiver and talk into it.

He has begun to toddle.

His talk consists mainly of such words as "wanna get down," "big bow-wow," and simple nursery words.

He dislikes strangers, whimpers if they fondle him and draws himself away from them.

He has blue eyes like his father.

His hair is light and curly.

His head seems unusually large.

Although any one who has seen Col. Lindbergh's picture should recognize the baby, his facial features are those of his mother.

He is twenty months old, two feet nine inches tall and weighs thirty pounds. When stolen from his crib, he wore a white babygown, one-piece sleeping suit, size two, with long sleeves and stitched feet. Six pearl buttons down the front and three across the hips at the back.

NATION JOINS HUNT FOR MISSING BABE; GOVERNMENT HELPS

Citizens Assisting Authorities In Huge Baby-Search

NEW YORK, March 3.—The entire American nation was galvanized today into action to hunt by air, by land, by sea, for the abductors of the world's best beloved baby, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.

Federal, state and local authorities threw all their might and resources into the unprecedentedly vast and alert pursuit of the criminals, while citizens everywhere constituted themselves detectives seeking some trace of the baby or its kidnapers.

Modern mechanical aids were linked to the huge man power mobilized in following clues, however scanty, in watching railroad terminals, airports, bridges, highways ferries and crossing points along the Canadian and Mexican borders.

Especially in the East, since the famous baby of the famous flying colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was taken from his crib at Hopewell, N. J., thousands of automobiles were halted, searched and the occupants made to identify themselves.

Federal secret service agents entered on "Lindbergh duty" on orders of President Hoover. Coast guard units watched for the kidnapers along the Atlantic and the Great Lakes.

Radio, television, radio teletype alarms, were pressed into service.

In New York, Police Commissioner Mulrooney promulgated an extraordinary order to his force of 20,000 policemen and detectives to join the intense pursuit of the kidnapers with the greatest vigor and to stay on duty "around the clock" until the baby is found.

All those who entered or left the

WOMAN IS FATALLY BURNED BY BLAST

ATHENS, O., March 3.—Burns caused by an explosion which resulted when she accidentally used a bottle of cleaning fluid into a gas stove today caused the death of Miss Lucille Aurelia Friedrich, 32, of Massillon, a member of the Ohio University faculty.

Miss Friedrich was national treasurer of Theta Phi Alpha sorority. Three years ago Miss Friedrich's mother, Mrs. Magdalene Friedrich of Massillon, was made an invalid by a similar explosion.

WILL TEST SALE OF HAIR TONIC

DAYTON, O., Mar. 3.—A test of the legality of the sale of hair tonic 61 per cent. alcoholic was promised here today.

John May grocer, was to be brought before Judge Mason Douglas for a ruling. County authorities charged May with the sale of intoxicating liquors, declaring he knew the tonic was being used for drinking.

Chinese Army Routed Beyond District Fixed By Japs

SHANGHAI, March 3.—The Japanese consulate announced today that the Japanese military operations in Shanghai would cease immediately.

Despite the Japanese announcement, however, sharp firing continued to be heard in the direction of Nanziang after 7 o'clock this evening.

Chinese authorities outspokenly doubted the good faith of the Japanese, and predicted that they would invade and occupy the suburb of Nantao tonight.

Chinese police in Nantao were handing in their arms and withdrawing from the district, apparently panic-stricken over the expected Japanese invasion. Despite the defection of police, no looting or other disorder was reported.

Chinese merchants petitioned the foreign consular body today, asking international protection for Chinese citizens within the area taken over by the Japanese.

Following a full retreat of the Chinese nineteenth route army which had been defending Shanghai and a consequent virtually complete clearance of Chinese troops from the area within the 12.4 mile-radius of Shanghai, as had been demanded by the Japanese, their consulate issued the following statement:

"Now that the Japanese military and naval authorities have accomplished their avowed object of protection to Japanese life and property and of obtaining the safety of the international settlement, they have decided their military operations will be stopped forthwith."

The statement followed a few hours after the capture by the Japanese of the final Chinese stronghold, the Woosung Forts where the commander refused to obey evacuation orders issued by General Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the Chinese nineteenth route army.

The forts were rushed by a naval force as the Chinese defenders fled under a heavy bombardment of heavy artillery and naval guns. The Japanese flag soon flew over the forts, the United States navy reported.

Shortly before the fall of the Woosung positions the retreating Chinese made a last stand at Nanziang, where General Tsai attempted to draw up a defense line just within the 12.4 mile limit.

His army had been retreating eastward toward Quinsan, along the Shanghai-Nanking Railway and thirty miles from Shanghai, while the Japanese bombed the rail line behind the Chinese soldiers.

The Chinese were drawn into fighting formation, but had no chance against the superior forces of the Japanese.

There was a slight encounter, and the retreat eastward continued. The Japanese were not expected to pursue them beyond the 12.4 mile limit set in their ultimatum.

Announcing a cessation of hostilities bore out this.

The status of peace negotiations was indefinite. Shortly before the order to halt fighting was issued, the Japanese, through a British intermediary, requested the Chinese to meet with them to discuss stopping hostilities in all sectors. This was before the Chinese had been

CANCEL PLANS FOR FAIRFIELD PIKE

Cancellation of the Xenia-Fairfield Pike construction project, for which bids were to be received Friday, was announced by O. W. Merrill, state highway director, Thursday.

The cancellation was declared to be due to inability of the state to obtain all of the necessary right-of-way.

The proposed work was a two-mile extension of concrete paving on state route 235, the Fairfield Pike, from the point where the present paving ends, into Fairfield.

The estimated cost was $71,642.25.

Bids will again be asked on the project as soon as the right-of-way is obtained, Director Merrill said.

ESCAPED CLUBBER IS BACK IN PRISON

MANSFIELD, O., Mar. 3.—"The Clubber," as they called Edward Ralph several years ago when he was accused of terrorizing Cleveland women, was back in the Mansfield reformatory today.

Ralph, who escaped the reformatory on Nov. 10, 1931, was captured in California where he had gone immediately after he broke away. He was returned by authorities yesterday.

SUVA, Fiji Islands, March 3.—A hurricane struck the area just north of Efate, in the New Hebrides Islands, today, inflicting extensive damage, according to official reports reaching here.

LATEST PHOTO OF KIDNAPED LINDBERGH BABY

Here is the latest picture of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., the world's best known baby. His kidnapping, from the Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J., stirred the entire world.

BABY'S DIET IS PUBLISHED

HOPEWELL, N. J., Mar. 3.—In the hope that whoever kidnaped her baby son, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., will remember a mother's anxiety and take care of him—especially as he is suffering from a severe cold—Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh today published the baby's diet.

The diet follows:

1 quart of milk during the day.

2 tablespoonfuls of cooked cereal morning and night.

2 tablespoonfuls of canned vegetables once a day.

1 yolk of egg once a day.

1 baked potato or rice once a day.

2 tablespoonfuls of stewed fruit.

1/2 cup of orange juice on awakening.

1/2 cup of prune juice after afternoon nap.

14 drops of viosterol during the day.

REPORT CHILD IS KIDNAPED

ST. LOUIS, Mar. 3.—Carl Dame, 12, of Troy, Ill., was kidnapped today, according to a telephone message received by St. Louis police.

The message to police here said that the kidnaper was a man wearing a "yellow sweater and tan trousers."

Troy is about eighteen miles northeast of St. Louis.

Anne Lindbergh Finds Consolation In Poetry

By DOROTHY DUCAS
I. N. S. Correspondent
HOPEWELL, N. J., March 3.—From the stone-walled terrace of the Lindbergh house a brown-haired girl with brown eyes of a poet gazes twenty miles into a windswept valley, trying to formulate lovely phrases to keep her mind from dwelling on sordid thoughts.

Upstairs in a corner room the shutters are closed, and there is no murmur of a boyish baby voice, which had sent the girl's mind racing into poetry.

But Anne Morrow Lindbergh will not loosen her grasp upon the beauties of speech and sound and word which have been her nature's bread and butter for years. Her child gone, her health precarious, the wife of that blonde aviator who is the nation's hero clings to poetry as some women might to prayer.

A rare young woman is Anne Morrow Lindbergh; reticent, given to short words and short sentences, shy in crowds, unable to reveal her emotions—save in rhythmic lines. And in this time of trouble her poetic nature is standing her in good stead. Desperately, passionately, she turns the pages of her favorite volumes.

With lines of concentration between her brows, she murmurs to herself her favorite lines.

Ideas get mixed. Banned thoughts creep in.

If Charlie is not kept well wrapped in blankets, his cold might get worse. But the sweep of that hillside is beautiful, softly rolling, curving, like a baby's arm. He did have such chubby, soft-skinned arms, her son! If only he were here....

It is hard to keep your thoughts on poetry, when you long for the touch of a baby's fingers.

She stayed close to the nursery, and by her side sat Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, a recent widow, and her mother's best friend, Mrs. Charles Hults of Englewood.

They were concerned for Anne's health; for the distraught mother expects a new baby late this spring.

In another room of that house of sorrow, where it is said the Lindberghs will not want to stay, after this ordeal, there is another

FATHER OF KIDNAPED NILES BOY AWAITING DEMAND FOR RANSOM

NILES, O., Mar. 3.—With police and county authorities of northern Ohio unable to find a trace of the abductors, James De Jute, Sr., prominent Niles contractor, today awaited a message from the two men who kidnaped his 12-year-old son, James Jr., while he was en route to school yesterday.

An airplane search for the kidnaper also proved futile after all roads in the vicinity of Niles had been scoured by the child hunters.

The plane was sent out from Warren, near here, and covered an area of fifty miles before returning.

Mrs. De Jute, mother of the missing lad, was reported near collapse today as police conducted the search for the abductors.

Authorities advanced the opinion that the abduction of the youth was well-planned and that the father would receive a demand for ransom.

TO MEET KIDNAPERS' DEMANDS; IDENTIFY PHOTOS OF SUSPECTS

Three Men Sought As Police Operate Independent Of Family In Probe; Investigation Shows Abduction Carefully Planned

By DAVID P. SENTNER

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 3.—Haggard but hopeful, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, was ready to make a deal—any sort of deal—with the kidnapers of his baby son.

With the path made easy to his door, the famous aviator today waited patiently for word from those who snatched away Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., as he slept in his nursery crib on Tuesday night.

The colonel and his distraught wife, the former Anne Morrow, were ready to pay... ready to promise... ready to agree... to ransom, immunity, secrecy.

The estate was cleared over a two-mile area of everybody but the troopers necessary to keep it clear.

If the kidnapers only know it, they may walk up the winding lane to the isolated Lindbergh homestead and conclude their barter.

The Lindberghs are not working with the police for fear it might conflict with negotiations which they are willing to conduct in good faith.

Neither are the police working with the Lindberghs—lest it would prevent the first baby of the land from being recovered.

From the police angle, today's most promising leads included:

1. The sighting of a cabin cruiser thirty-five miles off Scotland Light aboard which was a crying baby and three men. The skipper of the craft, sailing aimlessly, requested a compass from a passing vessel.

2. The reported identification of two or three men by a waitress in a restaurant at Pennington, N. J., five miles from here. The men asked her for the location of the Lindbergh house on the Friday before the kidnapping and returned on the night of the kidnapping, according to the waitress.

3. The possibility of tracing the kidnaper through the bizarre construction of the home-made ladder used by him in climbing to the baby's nursery on the second-story.

4. The postcard mailed from Newark to "Charles Linberg, Princeton, N. J." declaring the baby was safe and to wait for instructions.

EXPECTS BABY BACK
"I expect the baby back by noon today," Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, famous father of kidnaped Charles Junior, told police.

It was not disclosed upon what expectation Colonel Lindbergh based his belief that Charles Jr. would be returned safe and sound.

However, the colonel has declared that he would pay any sum to recover his child and awaited only word from the kidnapers as to "the means and occasion."

The kidnapers left behind a ransom note after they had stolen the golden-haired baby from his crib some time between 8 p. m. and 10 p. m. Tuesday.

Least possible negotiations with the kidnapping band be compromised, Colonel Lindbergh declined to admit the presence of the note or would any member of his household disclose the contents. However, it was reported that the ransom sum of $50,000 was demanded.

CLUE DISCOVERED
Meanwhile, the most promising clue was uncovered today since the gold-rail on the second-story nursery of the isolated Lindbergh homestead.

Two of three men reported to have been loitering in the vicinity of the Lindbergh estate before the kidnapping were identified through pictures in the rogues gallery of Newark, N. J.

A "Mrs. Keating," waitress in a Pennington, N. J., restaurant, made the identification. This was announced by John J. Toohy, secretary to Governor Harry Moore.

ASKED DIRECTIONS
The waitress told Police Inspector Charles Wilson of Jersey City that three men approached her last Friday and asked directions to Lindbergh's house.

The restaurant in Pennington where Mrs. Keating works is only five miles from Hopewell.

The men appeared again on the night of the kidnapping, she said. She served them and they left.

"I first saw the three men last Friday night," said Mrs. Keating. "They looked like foreigners. After they had finished eating, they tipped me well, and then asked directions to the Lindbergh home."

"I told them where it was and thought nothing of it at the time."

"On Tuesday night, about an hour before the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped, these same men returned to the restaurant. They ordered sandwiches. This time they didn't say anything to me and they left pretty suddenly."

State troopers here working on this lead believed that the trio left the restaurant about 7 p. m., or possibly from thirty minutes to an hour before little Charles was abducted.

Colonel Lindbergh denied emphatically that he had empowered anyone to negotiate with the kidnapers and make arrangements for the payment of a ransom.

State police said that the Lindberghs had received no communication from the kidnapers other than the purported one written on the back of a government postcard.

This card, mailed in Newark, N. J., was addressed in pencil to "Chas. Linberg, Princeton, N. J."

In crude printing, it read: "Baby safe. Instructions later. Act accordingly."

Through the night and into another day of agonizing suspense.

FIRST-GRADE HIGH SCHOOLS TO GET ADDITIONAL STATE HELP

First-grade high schools in state aid school districts of Greene County have been authorized to operate an additional two weeks, with assurance of state financial aid, beyond the eight-months' term for all such schools guaranteed at the beginning of the present school year. Announcement to this effect is contained in a letter received by H. C. Aultman, county school superintendent, from B. O. Skinner, state director of education. At the time the salary schedule for state aid school districts in Ohio for the present term was announced by the state department, boards of education were advised that all contracts should be drawn for only eight school months of twenty teaching days each, and also that contracts should contain a clause providing that schools may run longer than eight months if money is available. Funds will not be available to guarantee more than an eight-months' term for all schools, the director wrote, but he added that "it appears that the state is in position to recognize an expenditure sufficient to operate all first-grade high schools in state aid districts, for one-half a month in addition to the eight months already approved. In other words, the state will recognize an additional expenditure in state aid districts equivalent to the sum required to run chartered first-grade high schools for two weeks longer, this money to be used in extending high or elementary schools, or both, at the discretion of local boards of education. "Possibly this amount, together with the local levy in excess of the minimum of eight mills for the general fund, and other arrangements which can be made locally, will enable many districts to provide extended schooling for both elementary and high school students," Director Skinner suggested. The director enclosed blanks for school boards in this county to use in furnishing information whereby the state department can calculate the amounts which the boards may expect to receive on the basis of two weeks' additional schooling for high school pupils. Various arrangements that will be made in each district, as a result of participation in the state aid fund to the extent of two weeks' more schooling for high school students, may also be indicated on the blanks by the boards.

FIRST-GRADE HIGH SCHOOLS TO GET ADDITIONAL STATE HELP

First-grade high schools in state and school districts of Greene County have been authorized to operate an additional two weeks, with assurance of state financial aid, beyond the eight-months' term for all such schools guaranteed at the beginning of the present school year. Announcement to this effect is contained in a letter received by H. C. Aultman, county school superintendent, from B. O. Skinner, state director of education. At the time the salary schedule for state aid school districts in Ohio for the present term was announced by the state department, boards of education were advised that all contracts should be drawn for only eight school months of twenty teaching days each, and so that contracts should contain a clause providing that schools may run longer than eight months if money is available. Funds will not be available to guarantee more than an eight-months' term for all schools, the director wrote, but he added that "it appears that the state is in position to recognize an expenditure sufficient to operate all first-grade high schools in state aid districts, for one-half a month in addition to the eight months already approved. In other words, the state will recognize an additional expenditure in state aid districts equivalent to the sum required to run chartered first-grade high schools for two weeks longer, this money to be used in extending high or elementary schools, or both, at the discretion of local boards of education. "Possibly this amount, together with the local levy in excess of the minimum of eight mills for the general fund, and other arrangements which can be made locally, will enable many districts to provide extended schooling for both elementary and high school students," Director Skinner suggested. The director enclosed blanks for school boards in this county to use in furnishing information whereby the state department can calculate the amounts which the boards may expect to receive on the basis of two weeks' additional schooling for high school pupils. Various arrangements that will be made in each district, as a result of participation in the state aid fund to the extent of two weeks' more schooling for high school students, may also be indicated on the blanks by the boards.

Thor O'good Chicks

NOW 10c

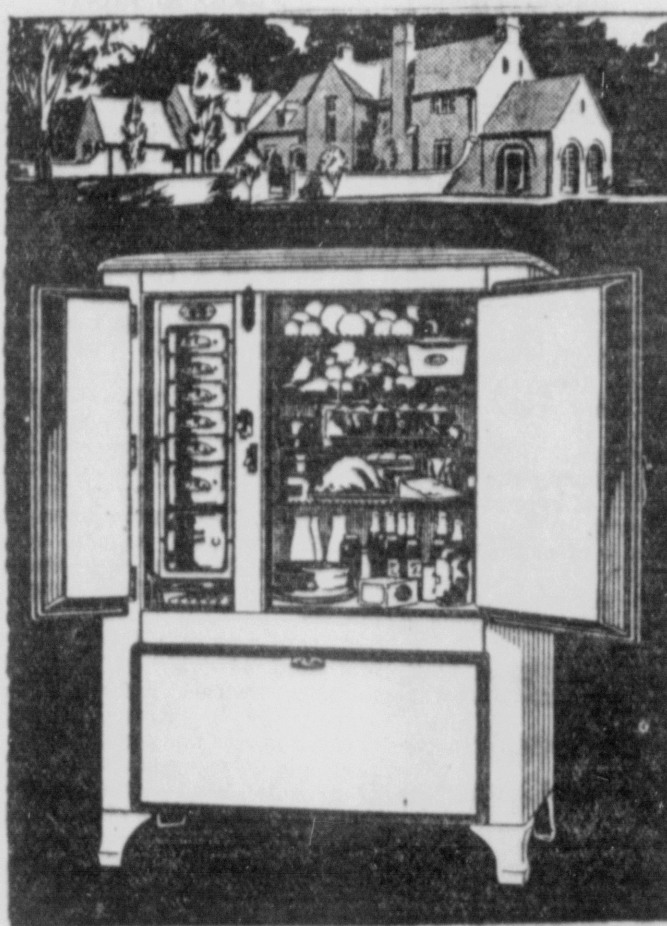

The country once yearned for a GOOD FIVE CENT CIGAR... What can help more now than REALLY GOOD TEN CENT CHICKS? Saturday's Cincinnati market showed fat hogs at 4½ cents top, and choice broilers at 25 cents. The same amount of feed is required for a pound of pork or a pound of chicken.

You can now buy Thorogood Accredited Chicks from accurately blood tested stock for ten cents or less. White Rocks, Barred Rocks, Rhode Island Reds or White Wyandottes—10 cents. White Leghorns and assorted heavy breeds 9 cents. Hatches every Monday. Do something profitable. Raise Thorogood Chicks. Why take a chance with inferior stock when Thorogood Chicks cost so little?

SOCIAL SITUATION DESCRIBED BEFORE ANTIOCH ASSEMBLY

Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott, director of the Hudson Guild, a leader in the Ethical Culture movement and teacher at the Fieldston School, New York City, spoke at Antioch College Wednesday on "Forty Years in the New York Tenements".

In characterizing present conditions, he said that "the ordinary American families are the shock troops of this crisis. The families are pulling us through the horror of the unemployment situation.

They are keeping up the morale, though old people are losing the little hoards they have kept for security against approaching age, and young people are being denied the advantages of education. This year has shown what people really are."

Dr. Elliott continued, "The poorer classes of New York have never been living under worse conditions than they are now. They are going back to the slums they left a few years ago. Twenty-five hundred workers recently drafted for social services in New York, as well as the thousands engaged in it before, are trying to help these people."

The Zion Baptist Revival was attended Wednesday night by the largest crowd since the opening of the meeting. Spiritual fervor was also at the highest pitch. Sisters Gilbert, Watson and Windsor opened the praise service.

The Rev. M. M. D. Perdue, pastor-evangelist, spoke again to the great delight of the people. His subject was "A Bad Haircut in the Devil's Barber Shop". He treated the subject in a masterful way. Without making appeal to the sensational preacher swept on to an eloquent appeal to men to break away from the strongholds of sin and run to the city of refuge in Jesus Christ.

The preacher declared that the greatest catastrophe of all times was the overthrow and destruction of men who, failing to heed the warnings of God's word, the church and the preacher of the Gospel, Jesus Christ.

are today shorn of their strength and are helplessly degraded and bound, the victims of their own sins and the reapers of their own moral delinquencies. Sampson, the hero of the period of Israel, was pictured as a mighty man of God, born under a special dispensation and endowed with special gifts to begin the deliverance of Israel from the hand of its traditional enemy. Despite all these providences thrown his way, he failed to improve upon the weaker side of his nature and as a result was thrown in a snare in an evil time, the victim of his own folly. Righteous women were extolled and wicked women condemned. The lesson of fatal friendship was brought out forcibly by the preacher and men were exhorted to flee from the temptations of sin and be shorn of all the remaining vestige of the power of resistance lest they, like Sampson, be overthrown by their own folly.

The subject for Thursday night is "When the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day". This is another interesting discussion.

Revs. Liggins, Scott, Blade and Taylor were present and assisted in the meeting.

JAPAN'S MILITARISTIC POLICY

Wars are frequently built on trifling things—personal ambition or an assassination such as started the World War.

Back of Japan's aggression in China are some peculiar conditions, which contribute in no small degree toward that country's belligerent attitude.

Consider that 50 per cent of Japan's farm families depend on silk culture and 25 per cent of her industrial workers are employed in the silk industry, while almost 90 per cent of the raw silk produced is sold to the United States and American women, feeling the economic pressure of depression, have not bought their usual quota of silk.

Add to this the thought that Japan's population has nearly doubled in the last thirty years, in spite of the fact that her people are living on relatively infertile mountainous islands, and the reason why the nation has fallen easy prey to military jingoists, is somewhat evident.

The feature of her attitude which is not understandable is that Japan's moves have been characterized by arrogance and contempt for treaties and rights of foreigners. There is dynamite in such a situation. A single overt act might precipitate a world conflict with the possibility of the United States being involved.

However, on the economic side, there is a great saving influence against Japan becoming involved in a war with the United States aside from her trade with us, and a wish not to endanger that. Even the most enthusiastic of her military leaders must realize that she cannot be self-supporting on food and munitions for more than six months of a major war. In her attitude she has alienated other nations by a policy of aggression and it would appear that she would stand almost alone in any disturbance she stirs up.

Thus, it is at least logical to think that Tokyo will try just as diligently as Washington to prevent a serious involvement between these nations.

U. S. NAVY

Concentration of virtually the entire United States Navy in the Pacific at this time naturally gives joy to the jingoes and apprehension to the faint of heart. The jingoes read into it a threat to Japan, which they welcome. The pacifists see in it a provocative act, which they deplore. They are both wrong. Admiral Pratt states that this concentration of fighting ships has been contemplated ever since the Pacific maneuvers were announced. The fact that these maneuvers happen to coincide with the disturbance in China consequently cannot be said to have any deliberate significance.

When it was decided in 1907 to send the Atlantic Battleship Fleet around the world, a similar misinterpretation of motives and possible consequences was widespread in this country. Opponents of the cruise declared that Japan would resent so much display of naval power by the United States in an ocean that washed its shores. As a matter of subsequent fact, Japan joined Australia, New Zealand and China in inviting the fleet to continue its course from San Francisco to their ports.

All the world knows that the United States has a navy. All the world knows, too, that the Panama Canal was built primarily to enable that navy the more quickly to be mobilized in either the Pacific or the Atlantic, as occasion might demand. The maneuvers in Hawaiian waters are part of the ordinary and necessary training of ships and men. They are not a menace to any country on the globe—although the concentration of fighting power effected by them unquestionably would prove advantageous if unhappily American interests in the Orient should be jeopardized to the point where further naval protection would be required. Consequently Americans should be slow to place upon them a construction that apparently is not placed upon them by other nations.

IMPORTANT MATTERS

In asking Congress to consider a revision of the Nation's criminal procedure in order to block the escape of lawbreakers through resort to legal technicalities, and in placing emphasis on the need for a revision of the bankruptcy laws in order to prevent waste and exploitation, President Hoover has taken up matters quite as important to the good of the Country as any that have been made the subject of legislation since the commencement of the session.

Everybody knows that from the social and moral sides, the suppression of crime is of first class consequence. It is of equal consequence on the economic side.

The annual property waste and loss in the United States in the form of tribute paid to racketeers, blackmailers, kidnapers and other extortionists runs into the billions. If this waste could be stopped, one of the main obstacles in the way of economic recovery would vanish. The tribute paid to professional, commercialized outlaws is a major tax on the people of the Nation. There is only one way to get rid of it and that is to destroy the outlaws.

As to the need for reform of the bankruptcy laws, the inadequacy of the present statutes in a time of stress such as the one through which we are passing has been exemplified so eloquently, time after time, that there is no occasion to argue the point.

HE ONCE WROTE

The acidity with which Chairman Sirovich of the House Patents Committee views dramatic critics and their criticism is, we take it, sufficiently explained by the report that the Congressman from the Fourteenth New York District himself once wrote a play. Judging from his attitude, it is to be feared that the piece, though doubtless full of excellence, failed to secure unbridled adulation from the scribes who sat in judgment.

Whether critics from various cities of the Country will accept the invitation Mr. Sirovich now extends to them to journey to Washington so he can "bawl them out" remains to be seen. Few critics are wealthy, and transportation expenses are high. But meanwhile there is a certain suggestion of innocence, not to say veridicality, about the affirmative noddings of heads among members of Mr. Sirovich's committee in response to his assertion that "adverse criticism of plays is responsible more than any other one factor for the fact that four out of five legitimate dramas are financial failures."

That remark by Sirovich suggests a number of things, among them, a low opinion of public intelligence, and a faulty knowledge and understanding of the history of the stage in this Country during even the recent past. "Destructive critics" were quite as prevalent in New York and elsewhere a few years ago as they are today. Yet it is not so very long since almost any play, possessing real worth, could be produced and turned into a money maker of a sort. The wicked critics with their death's-head stares were quite impotent in their wickedness.

As a matter of fact—and here is a tip for Mr. Sirovich and his committee—it is very well understood among producers that no adverse criticism was ever able to prevent a really good play from winning out in the end, and no amount of favorable, laudatory comment was ever able to keep a poor play alive.

There is no excuse for the deliberately destructive critics, but like the Devil he is helpless in the face of real merit. The legitimate stage is undoubtedly hard pressed, but the reason for the condition that Mr. Sirovich advances seems rather absurd and fantastic in view of the obviousness of some of the real ones.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK, Mar. 2.—I've had my first experience with the teletype and despite the marvelousness of that device, I'm not eager for another session soon.

The teletype as you may know is a machine which resembles a small stove with a typewriter attachment. The operator strikes the keys and each impression is registered on another teletype, perhaps thousands of miles away.

It is quite astonishing, and makes one wonder about the marvels of modern science and all that, but there's a catch to it. Charges are assessed upon a time basis. If you can click off fifty or sixty words a minute, everything is fine, but I was composing as I went along and my average would have been about eight words per sixty seconds. Or approximately a mint per hour.

As it happened, I was trying to teletype a column to Cleveland. Nervous, and all thumbs, I knew there was going to be trouble ahead as soon as the neatly rounded periods began to pour into type from Cleveland, telling me all was in readiness. The first key I struck was a typographical error, as were about half of those struck afterwards.

For one thing, it is disconcerting to have sentences bob up upon the paper in your typewriter, as if a ghost were in command of the keys. The teletype is the really scientific outboard.

"Columnists," I pecked out hesitantly, "are temperamental as—"
There was a premonitory buzz in the interior of the machine and the Cleveland operator interrupted: "Hold it. Unless you can write ten times as fast as that, this will cost more than Constance Bennett's yearly horse bill."
I telephoned the column.

SEARCH

A professional guide had a party of sight-seers in the tower of the Chrysler building the other morning. His charges had their fill of gazing at the breath-taking panorama spread out on all sides. But at last they grew a little restive; they'd been there nearly an hour and seen the whole show.

The guide, an abstracted look in his eyes, continued to walk slowly around the observation floor, peering fixedly at the city in every direction. A customer at length asked him why they weren't moving on.

He sighed. "I was looking," he confessed sadly, "for the Flatiron building. My pal told me it was one of the finest sights in town and now I can't find the darned thing!"

QUIRKS

There are only about half a dozen restaurants in town with chairs which are remotely comfortable. . . . Only recently have Pullman berths been lengthened to accommodate a full-grown adult, and the only way to be comfortable in most balcony theater seats is to put your legs over the shoulders of the spectator in front. . . . Or is my chassis not built to scale?

Breathes there the mortal who hasn't been told some time or other that he or she was the image of some movie star? . . . And breathes there the mortal who hasn't liked the idea? . . . Funny, though, I've never heard anyone accused of having a voice like any of the radio celebrities.

I never saw a piece of French pastry which was quite as good as it was pretty.

WOMAN'S NEW OPPORTUNITY

In a recent work of fiction there was a sentence that read something like this, "She realized that she was the victim of a system that tends to keep idle a large section of energetic young women." We must acknowledge that this has been the order for more years than we care to admit, but the question is, Need it always be so?

Woman's position has been tremendously affected by the changing conditions of foregoing years with the result that the average woman of 1932 years for both an active and an intellectual outlet as perhaps never before. To have reached the age of forty without having found it, is nothing short of tragedy. The countless hours of free time at the disposal of these individuals, considered by many as a favored group, are discolored by the dispiriting but mistaken conclusion that nothing they can do has any real relation to the world's work.

But here is the point. The scope of opportunity is wider today than ever before and women are beginning to take advantage of it. A February periodical stated that: "The income tax returns show women tending to 'inherit the earth.'" This means a tremendous increase of advantage and as we see women sitting on boards of directors and as high executives we realize that some women have not only visualized but are actually capitalizing the possibilities entailed.

There are dozens of fields today into which women with vision and stamina may venture. Professional, business, philanthropic, political, or the larger and never ending field of good government and community development at home, all these avenues of effort and of service are rich with promise.

Unknown forces, which we cannot estimate, are at work shaping a vast new era of development. There is no sure way to calculate the span of years that will be required to see the result, but the important point remains that a period of readjustment is always one of opportunity for those with vision enough to grasp it.

So take new courage, the future is bright with hope. If you are serious about wanting your chance to do something, it is up to you to look the opportunities of today squarely in the eye.

That Inner Jackass
He's In Us All

How Loudly He Brays

W. E. Woodward says there's a jackass in every one of us.

In himself.

In you.

In me, too.

"And everyone has moments of fatal indiscretion (says he) times when the jackass that lives in all men and women steps out and brays. Unfortunately these moments are usually beyond recall and survive forever. Before the jackass is batted over the head, the deed is done, the check is mailed, the marriage proposal has been made, the boss has been insulted, the asinine anecdote has started on its travels. It is a law of life."

He calls this the Woodward Theory of the Inner Jackass and he evolved it out of the suffering and embarrassment of his own soul. He knows all about that jackass. He knows what it feeds on, he knows how loudly that jackass brays, he knows how powerfully that animal can kick.

So does everybody else. We've all got a jackass. We've all heard him bray and felt his steel-shod hooves on portions of our persons.

See that man over there. He was sitting quietly in his chair and suddenly he blushed. All by himself, with nobody talking to him, the mantle of shame crept over his face. Suddenly he remembered something incredibly asinine that he did fifty years ago.

He hadn't confessed to us. We know.

Notice that dignified lady the one with grandchildren at her knees. I saw her blushing one day.

. . . She was thinking of the sup of the tongue she made on August 26, 1887. . . . She was remembering how silly she was in the spring of '93. . . . She heard the thump of the inner Jackass, restless in his stall.

Am I blushing? I'm remembering a number of things I did long long ago—when I was 10, when I was 15, when I was 19 when I was 22, when I was 30—and just last week, too. What were those things?

Never mind. I'll tell you. They weren't sins, they were just absurd, stupid, ignorant stunts, and you'll not persuade me to put them into words.

My Inner Jackass is the only creature that knows them. When I'm pretending to be wise, I hear him bray. When I'm strictly on my dignity, I feel his swift, sharp hooves upon me.

He has a vicious disposition and his manners are atrocious and I'd hardly say I love him. But I wouldn't be trading him for Pegasus or Black Beauty or even Man of War.

How about your own Inner Jackass?

"MY MOTHER BIDS ME BIND MY HAIR"

My mother bids me bind my hair
With bands of rosy hue;
Tie up my sleeves with ribbons rare,
And lace my bodice blue!

"For why," she cries, "sit still and weep.

While others dance and play?"

Alas! I scarce can go, or creep,
While Lubin is away!

'Tis sad to think the days are gone
When those we love were near!
I sit upon this mossy stone,
And sigh when none can hear:

And while I spin my flaxen thread
And sing my simple lay,
The village seems asleep, or dead,
Now Lubin is away!

LAST NIGHT

I sat with one I love last night,
She sang to me an olden strain;
In former times it woke delight,
Last night—but pain.

Last night we saw the stars arise,
But clouds soon dimmed the ether blue;
And when we sought each other's eyes
Tears dimmed them too!

We paced along our favorite walk,
But paced in silence broken hearted;
Of old we used to smile and talk;
Last night—we parted.

Headache Is Useful

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The first thing to note about the pain of the neurotic headache is that it is not a pain at all. The possessor of a neurotic headache will correct you if you refer to it as a pain. It is a pressure or a throbbing; "it feels as if my head were in a vise"; a feeling of lightness or heaviness or fullness, as if a foreign body were inside the head, liquid, solid, loose or fixed; but never a pain.

Sometimes it is a veil or screen or cloud which prevents all intellectual activity.

Then the neurotic headache is likely to be in a very definite place—"at the base of the brain" is a favorite spot.

These neurotic headaches are very useful things. They save the owner nearly all the disagreeable things in life. "Dear Aunt Sarah: We would love to have you visit us this spring but my headaches have been so bad lately that I fear you would not enjoy yourself." There is your friendly neurotic headache.

Or, "I simply can't go to church this morning; my head is nearly killing me."

If a young person finds out the value of having a headache look out for him. "Johnny strained his eyes studying and he won't be able to take the arithmetic examination; his head aches every time he opens a book."

Strained eyes and the resulting headache often mean merely a neurosis: such a habit as that in Johnny is a very bad one to encourage.

Sometimes people with neurotic headaches interpret them to mean that they are going insane. Reasonsurance on this point may be all that is necessary to cure the headaches.

The treatment of all such headaches is psychological. They are not easy to overcome. Their roots are deep in character maladjustments—the misunderstood wife, the poet who can't get his poems published, that Johnny who found he could get out of his arithmetic examination by having a headache, grown to manhood—heaven pity the poor wife who gets him by the way—such things are hard to eradicate. But conservative modern psychotherapy can do a good deal.

A new and simple remedy for headache is salt. Its use is based on the fact that an excess of salt in the blood, such as occurs when salt solution is given in the vein, reduces the pressure of the fluid around the brain and spinal cord. A Baltimore physician conceived the idea of giving salt by mouth for headaches. It seems to work splendidly.

The greatest difficulty is encountered in keeping the salt from irritating the stomach: nausea and vomiting may ensue if it does. This was overcome by coating 15 grains of salt with salol. Salol is not dissolved by the stomach but is dissolved by the intestinal juices so that the salt is delivered directly to the intestines. The method is so simple and harmless that it deserves a trial in stubborn forms of headache.

JAPAN'S MILITARISTIC POLICY

Wars are frequently built on trifling things—personal ambition or an assassination such as started the World War.

Back of Japan's aggression in China are some peculiar conditions, which contribute in no small degree toward that country's belligerent attitude.

Consider that 50 per cent of Japan's farm families depend on silk culture and 25 per cent of her industrial workers are employed in the silk industry, while almost 90 per cent of the raw silk produced is sold to the United States and American women, feeling the economic pressure of depression, have not bought their usual quota of silk.

Add to this the thought that Japan's population has nearly doubled in the last thirty years, in spite of the fact that her people are living on relatively infertile mountainous islands, and the reason why the nation has fallen easy prey to military jingoism, is somewhat evident.

The feature of her attitude which is not understandable is that Japan's moves have been characterized by arrogance and contempt for treaties and rights of foreigners. There is dynamite in such a situation. A single overt act might precipitate a world conflict with the possibility of the United States being involved.

However, on the economic side, there is a great saving influence against Japan becoming involved in a war with the United States aside from her trade with us, and a wish not to endanger that. Even the most enthusiastic of her military leaders must realize that she cannot be self-supporting on food and munitions for more than six months of a major war. In her attitude she has alienated other nations by a policy of aggression and it would appear that she would stand almost alone in any disturbance she stirs up.

Thus, it is at least logical to think that Tokyo will try just as diligently as Washington to prevent a serious involvement between these nations.

U. S. NAVY

Concentration of virtually the entire United States Navy in the Pacific at this time naturally gives joy to the jingoes and apprehension to the faint of heart. The jingoes read into it a threat to Japan, which they welcome. The pacifists see in it a provocative act, which they deplore. They are both wrong. Admiral Pratt states that this concentration of fighting ships has been contemplated ever since the Pacific maneuvers were announced. The fact that these maneuvers happen to coincide with the disturbance in China consequently cannot be said to have any deliberate significance.

When it was decided in 1907 to send the Atlantic Battleship Fleet around the world, a similar misinterpretation of motives and possible consequences was widespread in this country. Opponents of the cruise declared that Japan would resent so much display of naval power by the United States in an ocean that washed its shores. As a matter of subsequent fact, Japan joined Australia, New Zealand and China in inviting the fleet to continue its course from San Francisco to their ports.

All the world knows that the United States has a navy. All the world knows, too, that the Panama Canal was built primarily to enable that navy the more quickly to be mobilized in either the Pacific or the Atlantic, as occasion might demand. The maneuvers in Hawaiian waters are part of the ordinary and necessary training of ships and men. They are not a menace to any country on the globe—although the concentration of fighting power effected by them unquestionably would prove advantageous if unhappily American interests in the Orient should be jeopardized to the point where further naval protection would be required. Consequently Americans should be slow to place upon them a construction that apparently is not placed upon them by other nations.

IMPORTANT MATTERS

In asking Congress to consider a revision of the Nation's criminal procedure in order to block the escape of lawbreakers through resort to legal technicalities, and in placing emphasis on the need for a revision of the bankruptcy laws in order to prevent waste and exploitation, President Hoover has taken up matters quite as important to the good of the Country as any that have been made the subject of legislation since the commencement of the session.

Everybody knows that from the social and moral sides, the suppression of crime is of first class consequence. It is of equal consequence on the economic side.

The annual property waste and loss in the United States in the form of tribute paid to racketeers, blackmailers, kidnapers and other extortionists runs into the billions. If this waste could be stopped, one of the main obstacles in the way of economic recovery would vanish. The tribute paid to professional, commercialized outlawry is a major tax on the people of the Nation. There is only one way to get rid of it and that is to destroy the outlawry.

As to the need for reform of the bankruptcy laws, the inadequacy of the present statutes in a time of stress such as the one through which we are passing has been exemplified so eloquently, time after time, that there is no occasion to argue the point.

HE ONCE WROTE

The acidity with which Chairman Sirovich of the House Patents Committee views dramatic critics and their criticism is, we take it, sufficiently explained by the report that the Congressman from the Fourteenth New York District himself once wrote a play. Judging from his attitude, it is to be feared that the piece, though doubtless full of excellence, failed to secure unbridled adulation from the scribes who sat in judgment.

Whether critics from various cities of the Country will accept the invitation Mr. Sirovich now extends to them to journey to Washington so he can "bawl them out" remains to be seen. Few critics are wealthy, and transportation expenses are high. But meanwhile there is a certain suggestion of innocence, not to say veracity, about the affirmative noddings of heads among members of Mr. Sirovich's committee in response to his assertion that "adverse criticism of plays is responsible more than any other one factor for the fact that four out of five legitimate dramas are financial failures."

That remark by Sirovich suggests a number of things, among them, a low opinion of public intelligence, and a faulty knowledge and understanding of the history of the stage in this Country during even the recent past. "Destructive critics" were quite as prevalent in New York and elsewhere a few years ago as they are today. Yet it is not so very long since almost any play, possessing real worth, could be produced and turned into a money maker of a sort. The wicked critics with their death-head stares were quite impotent in their wickedness.

As a matter of fact—and here is a tip for Mr. Sirovich and his committee—it is very well understood among producers that no adverse criticism was ever able to prevent a really good play from winning out in the end, and no amount of favorable, laudatory comment was ever able to keep a poor play alive.

There is no excuse for the deliberately destructive critics, but like the Devil he is helpless in the face of real merit. The legitimate stage is undoubtedly hard pressed, but the reason for the condition that Mr. Sirovich advances seems rather absurd and fantastic in view of the obviousness of some of the real ones.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK, Mar. 2—I've had my first experience with the teletype and despite the marvelousness of that device, I'm not eager for another session soon.

The teletype as you may know is a machine which resembles a small stove with a typewriter attachment. The operator strikes the keys and each impression is registered on another teletype, perhaps a thousand miles away.

It is quite astonishing, and makes one wonder about the marvels of modern science and all that, but there's a catch to it. Charges are assessed upon a time basis. If you can click off fifty or sixty words a minute, everything is fine, but I went along and my average would have been about eight words per sixty seconds. Or approximately a mint per hour.

As it happened, I was trying to teletype a column to Cleveland. Nervous, and all thumbs, I knew there was going to be trouble ahead as soon as the neatly rounded periods began to pour into type from Cleveland, telling me all was in readiness. The first key I struck was a typographical error, as were about half of those struck afterwards.

For one thing, it is disconcerting to have sentences bob up upon the paper in your typewriter, as if a ghost were in command of the keys. The teletype is the really scientific Ouija board.

"Columnists," I pecked out hesitantly, "are temperamental as—!" There was a premonitory buzz in the interior of the machine and the Cleveland operator interrupted: "Hold it. Unless you can write ten times as fast as that, this will cost more than Constance Bennett's yearly hose bill."

I telephoned the column.

SEARCH

A professional guide had a party of sight-seers in the tower of the Chrysler building the other morning. His charges had their fill of gazing at the breath-taking panorama spread out on all sides. But at last they grew a little restive; they'd been there nearly an hour and seen the whole show.

The guide, an abstracted look in his eyes, continued to walk slowly around the observation floor, peering fixedly at the city in every direction. A customer at length asked him why they weren't moving on.

He sighed. "I was looking," he confessed sadly, "for the Flatiron building. My pa told me it was one of the finest sights in town and now I can't find the darned thing!"

QUIRKS

There are only about half a dozen restaurants in town with chairs which are remotely comfortable.

Only recently have Pullman berths been lengthened to accommodate a full-grown adult, and the only way to be comfortable in most balcony theater seats is to put your legs over the shoulders of the spectator in front.... Or is my chassis not built to scale?

Breathes there the mortal who hasn't been told some time or other that he or she was the image of some movie star?... And breathes there the mortal who hasn't liked the idea?... Funny, though, I've never heard anyone accused of having a voice like any of the radio celebrities.

I never saw a piece of French pastry which was quite as good as it was pretty.

WOMAN'S NEW OPPORTUNITY

In a recent work of fiction there was a sentence that read something like this, "She realized that she was the victim of a system that tends to keep idle a large section of energetic young women." We must acknowledge that this has been the order for more years than we care to admit, but the question is, Need it always be so?

Woman's position has been tremendously affected by the changing conditions of foregoing years with the result that the average woman of 1932 years for both an active and an intellectual outlet as perhaps never before. By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The first thing to note about the pain of the neurotic headache is that it is not a pain at all. The possessor of a neurotic headache will correct you if you refer to it as a pain. It is a pressure or a throbbing; "it feels as if my head were in a vise"; a feeling of lightness or heaviness or fullness, as if a foreign body were inside the head, liquid, solid, loose or fixed; but never a pain.

Sometimes it is a veil or screen or cloud which prevents all intellectual activity.

Then the neurotic headache is likely to be in a very definite place—"at the base of the brain" is a favorite spot.

These neurotic headaches are very useful things. They save the owner nearly all the disagreeable things in life. "Dear Aunt Sarah: We would love to have you visit us this spring but my headaches have been so bad lately that I fear you would not enjoy yourself." There is your friendly neurotic headache.

Or, "I simply can't go to church this morning; my head is nearly killing me."

If a young person finds out the value of having a headache look out for him. "Johnny strained his eyes studying and he won't be able to take the arithmetic examination; his head aches every time he opens a book."

Strained eyes and the resulting headache often mean merely a neurotic habit such as that in Johnny is a very bad one to encourage.

Sometimes people with neurotic headaches interpret them to mean that they are going insane. Reas-urance on this point may be all that is necessary to cure the headaches.

The treatment of all such headaches is psychological. They are not easy to overcome. Their roots are deep in character maladjustments—the misunderstood wife, the poet who can't get his poems published, that Johnny who found he could get out of his arithmetic examination by having a headache, grown to manhood—heaven pity the poor wife who gets him, by the way—such things are hard to eradicate. But conservative modern psychotherapy can do a good deal.

A new and simple remedy for headache is salt. Its use is based on the fact that an excess of salt in the blood, such as occurs when salt solution is given in the vein, reduces the pressure of the fluid around the brain and spinal cord. A Baltimore physician conceived the idea of giving salt by mouth for headaches. It seems to work splendidly.

The greatest difficulty is encountered in keeping the salt from irritating the stomach: nausea and vomiting may ensue if it does. This was overcome by coating the grains of salt with salol. Salol is not dissolved by the stomach but is dissolved by the intestinal juices so that the salt is delivered directly to the intestines. The method is so simple and harmless that it deserves a trial in stubborn forms of headache.

The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Girl Is In Love

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"MY DEAR MISS LEE: I am only 15 and desperately in love with a man 23 who has just been graduated from college and has no job. Do you advise me to marry him?"

My parents do not know anything about my love affair, and I am afraid they would not approve of him, as his social standing is not anywhere near as high as mine.

"He has worked his way through college and won high honors in both athletic and scholastic fields. He has a terrible temper and is very good looking. He is very fond of children and is always kind to them if they don't rile him."

"Many girls are after him, but he has told me many times that I am the only one for him. He is very unselfish and never gets jealous if I happen to go out with other men. The only thing against him are certain little whispers that have gone around concerning him and a rather unpleasant affair with an out of town girl."

"I hope this is not true, but I have no proof that it isn't. He has never done anything in my presence to make me believe he is that kind of a man. I trust him entirely. Would you ask him outright if these rumors are true? I am sure he would tell me the truth about them. Please tell me what to do, because I love terribly, truly and desperately. BLUE EYES."

You know the answer, of course, Blue Eyes. You are too intelligent not to. You have the regular school girl crush on this handsome young man, who really has much to recommend him—brains and a will to accomplish a worthy object, namely, his education. He should be honored for that and his record in school.

Did you, however, ever live with a person with a terrible temper? Have you any idea what it means never to know whether you are going to be pleasantly greeted and have your questions answered courteously, or whether something has "ripped" and person and you get nothing but surliness or violent language and actions? If not, believe me, it is something you may be thankful for.

It's a nerve racking experience, and has turned many a person's love to hate when they happened to marry such a one.

Marriage is out of the question at present, of course. A girl of 15 can't marry without her parents' consent—unless, she lies about her age; and you, my friend, being the girl of a job make marriage now impractical, even if you were of age.

Your parents should know him. It is not honorable of him to court you without their knowledge and consent. It is unfortunate, of course, if they cannot appreciate his worth, even if his social standing is not the same as yours. You owe it to them and him to make them know to be another.

And as to the affair with the out of town girl, why not trust him about that?

Remedies Foot Troubles

By GLADYS GLAD

"DEAR MISS GLAD: Despite the fact that this is winter, I continue to be afflicted with excessively perspiring feet. It's an awful annoyance, and I'd be the happiest female in the world if you could suggest a remedy. Can you help me? Puh-leeze?"

"MRS. ROHR."

An excellent remedy for perspiring feet consists of a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. This solution should be applied to the feet three times the first week, and once a week thereafter. The feet should be cleansed thoroughly every day, of course, and a fresh change of stockings should be made at least once, and if possible, twice a day.

"Dear Miss Glad: I recently wrote to a beauty specialist and asked her to give me the proper measurements for a girl of my age—and height. She told me in reply that she could not give me such measurements, because there were no standard measurements for girls of different heights and ages. I am five feet two inches tall, and was wondering whether you could, by any chance, give me some idea of what my correct proportions should be. Can you help me? My age, by the way, is twenty years. MARIA."

As the beauty specialist you wrote to told you, there are no standard measurements for girls of different heights and ages. I could not, for instance, knowing just your height and age, give you what I consider your exact measurements, as there are too many other factors to be taken into consideration. In addition to height and age, one must consider hereditary tendencies, glandular conditions, racial differences and the bony structure of the body. I can, however, give you an approximate idea of what your Elwood Stroup, this city, Greene County game warden, set a steel trap recently for to catch a hawk. Later, when he went to examine the trap, he found a prisoner therein. However, it was a skunk instead of a hawk. This presented a ticklish problem, but Warden Stroup was equal to the occasion. Gaining the confidence of the skunk, he was able to approach near enough to hold down the animal's tail with a forked stick. This is supposed to make a skunk odorless. Stroup then pried open the jaws of the trap and the skunk, freed, disappeared in a nearby hole. The warden says he has caught all most everything in his traps but hawks.

Wilmington College is making an earnest effort to assure success for the Class B sectional state tournament it is sponsoring this week-end and in which Jefferson Twp. and Ross Twp. of this county, will compete.

Single admission of fifty cents a session will be charged all adults and high school students, and the fee for grade pupils will be thirty-five cents. A season ticket for the three sessions may be had for $1. Teams will be served meals in the college cafeteria. To any one else desiring them, meals will be served at a reasonable price in the dining room of Denver Dormitory. All teachers and students are welcomed to the college campus. The buildings will be thrown open for the entertainment of all.

Each of the five competing counties will send its two best football shooters to the Wilmington sectional tournament. Time for the throwing to start will be 8:45 p. m. Saturday. Herbert Cummings, of Ross, and Robert Smith, Springfield Valley, will represent Greene County in the free throw contest.

Xenia Central High has had enough of Leesburg and Waynesville as opening game opponents for its basketball seasons. The Buccaneers have booked the O. S. and S. O. Home for their first basketball game next fall, the game to be played at Central gym December 9, according to O. B. Bogart, faculty manager of athletics. The cadets are back on the Xenia cage schedule after an absence of quite a few years.

Softball fans may be required to dig a little deeper in their pockets to finance the sport here this summer. The Softball Commission has its $75 balance from last year on deposit in a closed Xenia bank.

ST. BRIGID CLOSES WITH DAYTON PREPS

St. Brigid High School's basketball quintet, winner of six out of ten games played this season, will close its schedule Thursday night, playing a return contest with the University of Dayton Preps at Central High gymnasium.

A previous game between the two schools at Dayton last January 8 resulted in a 15 to 8 victory for the "Baby Flyers." Since that time the Xenia cagers have been breeding along at a great clip, winning five out of their last six contests. St. Brigid hopes to not only end its season with a victory but square accounts with the Preps for the earlier defeat.

CEDARVILLE PLAYS AND LOSES 19 GAMES

Cedarville College's basketball team ended its schedule Wednesday night with many a victory to show for nineteen games played this season.

Displaying greater accuracy at foul shooting, Findlay College, second strongest team in the Northwest Ohio Conference, beat the Borstmans, 42 to 23, in a return contest at Alford gymnasium. The game was also the season's finale for Findlay.

The game was exceedingly rough, both teams using twice the minimum number of five players, more through necessity rather than choice, as personal fouls were numerous. Findlay enjoyed a lead of 20 to 16 at the half.

LEAGUE TEAMS MEET IN OPENER; WINNER GETS SPRINGFIELD

Play Final Contest On Opening Night; May Be Last Game

Xenia Central's basketball quintet will make its debut, and possibly its last bow, in the sectional Class A state tournament at Springfield Friday night, mingling with Troy High in a first round game at the Wittenberg College field house.

The Buccaneers and Trojans will start playing at 10 o'clock for the right to be eliminated by Springfield High in the second round of competition at 9:30 p. m. Saturday.

Xenia basketballers have been practicing faithfully for the tournament and are hopeful of surviving their first round contest. They recall, vividly, having beaten the Trojans by one point, 27 to 26, during the season, but since the victory was recorded at Central gymnasium, Troy may prove better on a neutral floor.

Coach "Pinky" Wilson will take ten players on the trip and school officials indicate that offers of free transportation for the boys to Springfield will be cheerfully accepted.

Winner of the Xenia-Troy contest will advance to the second round and meet the winner of the Springfield-Piqua game, namely, Springfield.

Two other basketball teams from Greene County will compete in the Class B division of the Springfield tournament. Osborn Bath High drew a first round bye and will meet Urbana Twp., runnerup for the Champaign County title, at 2 p. m. Saturday.

O. S. and S. O. Home team of Xenia met with misfortune in the draw and will face the unbeaten Westville team, champion of Champaign County, at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Following is the time schedule for the tournament contests at Springfield Friday and Saturday:

Friday Afternoon
1:30 p. m.—Anna vs. Plattsburg.
2:30 p. m.—Westville vs. O. S. & S. O. Home.
3:30 p. m.—Quincy vs. Champaign No. 3.
4:30 p. m.—Lawrenceville vs. Logan No. 3.

Friday Evening
7:00 p. m.—Urbana vs. Bellefontaine.
8:00 p. m.—Greenville vs. Sidney.
9:00 p. m.—Springfield vs. Piqua.
10:00 p. m.—Xenia vs. Troy.

Saturday Afternoon
1:00 p. m.—Olive Branch vs. Lakeview.
2:00 p. m.—Osborn vs. Urbana Twp.
3:00 p. m.—Winner No. 1 vs. Winner No. 2.

WARNER ASSISTANT MADE MIAMI COACH

OXFORD, O., Mar. 3.—Miami University looked forward to a rosy athletic future today following the appointment of a celebrated assistant of Glenn "Pop" Warner as its new football and basketball coach.

Frank S. Wilton, Jr., of San Mateo, Cal., who was appointed yesterday, is one of the great athletes of the western coast, according to advance information.

By Warner's own testimony, Wilton at Leland Stanford University proved to be "one of the finest students of football and one of the most finished players I have ever coached."

Prior to his graduation in 1928, he participated in three case west football games. After two years of high school coaching, Warner called him back to become his assistant.

In baseball he was a catcher and at the time of his graduation received numerous offers to join teams in the Pacific Coast League.

Wilton will arrive here next Monday to take charge of plans for Spring football.

ABANDONED AUTO IS SEARCHED FOR CLEW

HYATTSVILLE, Md., Mar. 3.—The operator of a service station here reported to police today a man, accompanied by a woman and a baby, drove into his station early Wednesday—the morning following the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby in New Jersey—and left his car for one day's parking.

Today the man, who gave his name as A. C. Lentz, had not called for his machine. The garage man recalled the Lindbergh case and notified Washington, D. C. detectives.

The machine bore Pennsylvania license tags AC135.

Search of the automobile revealed some road maps of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and other states, and a letter addressed to Lentz from a credit company. It was addressed to Lentz at No. 94 Bryan Ave., Minneapolis.

Police stationed a guard on the machine to await the owner's return.

LINDBERGH AVOIDS REST UNDER STRAIN OF KIDNAPING CASE

John Toohey, secretary to his excellency the governor of New Jersey, Fresh rumors came to torture already overstrained nerves. Toohey patiently disproved every one. Midnight passed and sleep seemed the most wonderful thing in the world. But just as there was no sleep for that tortured couple in the white house on the hill so there was no sleep for the men who were brought here to inform the world the whys and the wherefores of the crime.

All eyes were glued on the phone which reposed so innocently on John Toohey's desk.

Every ring of it would result in a strained tension. But as the night wore on and the chill of the early morning crept into the room one despaired of ever hearing news that would send an army of men rushing to typewriters and telephones. The mystery remained as baffling as ever.

An early morning trip to the barren country where the aviator built a house that was intended never to harbor unhappiness resulted in a glimpse of the harassed father out on the back terrace for a breath of air. His shoulders were stooped and it seemed he had aged twenty years in as many hours.

He was no longer the proud lone eagle.

He was a hapless husband, bewildered and hurt that such cruelty could be practiced upon him.

Meanwhile, the white house on the hill, quite proud of itself splashed in the sunshine, made a strange contrast to the mood of its master.

LETTER TO LINDY MAILED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, March 3.—A well-dressed woman walked into the south end postal station today and handed the clerk on duty at the receiving window a letter addressed to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

As the clerk gazed with amazement at the name and address on the letter the woman turned and left the postal station.

She was seen a few minutes later driving away in a touring car type automobile with the top down.

completely routed, although their situation was desperate.

However they refused, declaring they had no authority from the central government.

It was believed the Japanese intended to maintain their forces in Shanghai for a while in order to defend their positions. The order to cease military operations was interpreted by observers as an order to halt offensives and not an indication that troops would be withdrawn immediately.

The Japanese were understood to be under orders to fight if fired upon.

Chapei, deserted, was being swept with terrific flames which devoured all as they spread over large sections. This Chinese quarter of Shanghai saw action during every day and night of the month's encounter and the cessation of hostilities found it a mass of ruins.

Today's fires were the result of Japanese attacks yesterday behind the Chinese retreat. They raged unchecked.

GENEVA, Mar. 3.—W. W. Yen, Chinese delegate to the League of Nations council, formally accepted the British armistice proposal today for a "mutual and simultaneous evacuation" of Shanghai as the extraordinary assembly of the League began its discussion of the Sino-Japanese disputes.

This was the proposal tentatively arranged between Chinese and Japanese representatives aboard the British flagship of Admiral Kelly at Shanghai. In accepting the proposal China recognizes the need for the safety of the international settlement, Yen said.

NATION JOINS HUNT FOR MISSING BABE; GOVERNMENT HELPS

city by train or tube or ferry or automobile were carefully scrutinized. "Baby farms," hotels, lodging houses, were visited by searchers in the hope of unearthing some new clew to the Lindbergh baby.

Airplanes circled aloft over wide areas of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other states, often with famous pilots at the controls who hoped to spot some suspicious looking car or an isolated "hide-away" which might harbor the abductors and the world's most famous child.

Major Frank M. Nicholas, commander of state police in Connecticut, ordered every man out of barracks and on duty in the hunt. Similar action was taken by Major John A. Warner, superintendent of New York State police, at Albany.

Throughout New England, the roads from New York were placed under specially heavy guards.

Virginia, South Carolina, Ohio, Indiana and other Southern and Middle Western states enlisted in the efforts to capture the kidnappers. In many places, the American Legion instructed its posts to help.

For the first time, a New York radio station kept open all night broadcasting latest developments in the case which has stirred the entire nation as no other modern occurrence except perhaps the news of the armistice ending the world war.

Three different photographs of the Lindbergh baby were televised, marking the first time that this latest modern marvel was used in a man hunt.

Broadcasting stations also carried the appeal of Mrs. Lindbergh, transmitted by Governor Moore of New Jersey, that whoever has the baby protect him against ill health. A special diet to which Charles Augustus Jr. is accustomed was given over the air for the guide of the kidnappers in feeding him.

A special fleet of airplanes flew over the Lindbergh home and experts made aerial photographs of the whole region surrounding the dwelling.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN

Arriving in Boston Harbor

WHEN THE ship arrived in Boston harbor there was a great crowd of home folks awaiting him. A band played "Johnny Comes Marching Home." Once more installed in his home, John L. announced he was $25,000 richer as result of his English theatrical tour. Then Sullivan and Harry Phillips, his theatrical manager, quarreled over proceeds of a benefit and they split, just as John L. and Madden had done.

JOHN L. decided to go it alone. He bought an interest in the John B. Doris circus. The show included an exhibition bout between John L. and Jack Ashton. After showing in Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Bridgeport and New Haven, Conn., the mayor of Worcester, Mass., refused to permit a boxing bout to be included in the show. John L. was also stopped from boxing when the circus played in Providence, R. I.

A SHERIFF in Norwich, Conn., tried to stop the show and John L. tossed him out of the tent. In cities where John L. was not allowed to box he appeared as ringmaster, but the public was disappointed. Uncertainty as to whether Sullivan would box caused patrons to stay away. The circus failed to make much money. Sullivan's new venture was proving profitless.

Single admission of fifty cents a session will be charged all adults and high school students, and the fee for grade pupils will be thirty-five cents. A season ticket for the three sessions may be had for $1. Teams will be served meals in the college cafeteria. To any one else desiring them, meals will be served at a reasonable price in the dining room of Denver Dormitory. All teachers and students are welcomed to the college campus. The buildings will be thrown open for the entertainment of all.

Each of the five competing counties will send its two best football shooters to the Wilmington sectional tournament. Time for the throwing to start will be 6:45 p. m. Saturday. Herbert Cummings, of Ross, and Robert Smith, Springfield Valley, will represent Greene County in the free throw contest.

Xenia Central High has had enough of Leesburg and Waynesville as opening game opponents for its basketball season. The Buccaneers have booked the O. S. and S. O. Home for their first basketball game next fall, the game to be played at Central gym December 9, according to O. B. Bogart, faculty manager of athletics. The cadets are back on the Xenia cage schedule after an absence of quite a few years.

Softball fans may be required to dig a little deeper in their pockets to finance the sport here this summer. The Softball Commission had its $75 balance from last year on deposit in a closed Xenia bank.

ST. BRIGID CLOSING WITH DAYTON PREPS

St. Brigid High School's basketball quintet, winner of six out of ten games played this season, will close its schedule Thursday night, playing a return contest with the University of Dayton. Preps at Central High gymnasium.

A previous game between the two schools at Dayton last January 8 resulted in a 15 to 8 victory for the "Baby Flyers." Since that time the Xenia cagers have been breezing along at a great clip, winning five out of their last six contests. St. Brigid hopes to not only end its season with a victory but square accounts with the Preps for the earlier defeat.

CEDARVILLE PLAYS AND LOSES 19 GAMES

Cedarville College's basketball team ended its schedule Wednesday night with many a victory to show for nineteen games played this season.

Displaying greater accuracy at foul shooting, Findlay College, second strongest team in the Northwest Ohio Conference, beat the Borstmen, 42 to 28, in a return contest at Alford gymnasium. The game was also the season's finale for Findlay.

The game was exceedingly rough, both teams using twice the minimum number of five players, more through necessity rather than choice, as personal fouls were numerous. Findlay enjoyed a lead of 20 to 16 at the half.

Bucs Play Troy in Tournament Game Friday

LEAGUE TEAMS MEET IN OPENER; WINNER GETS SPRINGFIELD

Play Final Contest On Opening Night; May Be Last Game

Xenia Central's basketball quintet will make its debut, and possibly its last bow, in the sectional Class A state tournament at Springfield Friday night, mingling with Troy High in a first round game at the Wittenberg College field house. The Buccaneers and Trojans will start playing at 10 o'clock for the right to be eliminated by Springfield High in the second round of competition at 9:30 p. m. Saturday.

Xenia basketballers have been practicing faithfully for the tournament and are hopeful of surviving their first round contest. They recall, vividly, having beaten the Trojans by one point, 27 to 26, during the season, but since the victory was recorded at Central gymnasium, Troy may prove better on a neutral floor.

Coach "Pinkie" Wilson will take ten players on the trip and school officials indicate that offers of free transportation for the boys to Springfield will be cheerfully accepted.

Winner of the Xenia-Troy contest will advance to the second round and meet the winner of the Springfield-Piqua game, namely, Springfield.

Two other basketball teams from Greene County will compete in the Class B division of the Springfield tournament. Osborn Bath High drew a first round bye and will meet Urbana Twp., runnerup for the Champaign County title, at 2 p. m. Saturday. O. S. and S. O. Home team of Xenia met with misfortune in the draw and will face the unbeaten Westville team, champion of Champaign County, at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Following is the time schedule for the tournament contests at Springfield Friday and Saturday:

Friday Afternoon
1:30 p. m.—Anna vs. Plattsburg.
2:30 p. m.—Westville vs. O. S. & S. O. Home.
3:30 p. m.—Quincy vs. Champaign No. 3.
4:30 p. m.—Lawrenceville vs. Logan No. 3.
Friday Evening
7:00 p. m.—Urbana vs. Bellefontaine.
8:00 p. m.—Greenville vs. Sidney.
9:00 p. m.—Springfield vs. Piqua.
10:00 p. m.—Xenia vs. Troy.
Saturday Afternoon
1:00 p. m.—Olive Branch vs. Lakeview.

WARNER ASSISTANT MADE MIAMI COACH

OXFORD, O., Mar. 3.—Miami University looked forward to a rosy athletic future today following the appointment of a celebrated assistant of Glenn "Pop" Warner as its new football and baseball coach.

Frank S. Wilton, Jr., of San Mateo, Cal., who was appointed yesterday, is one of the great athletes of the western coast, according to advance information.

By Warner's own testimony, Wilton at Leland Stanford University proved to be "one of the finest students of football and one of the most finished players I have ever coached."

Prior to his graduation in 1925, he participated in three east-west football games. After two years of high school coaching, Warner called him back to become his assistant.

In baseball he was a catcher and at the time of his graduation received numerous offers to join teams in the Pacific Coast League.

Wilton will arrive here next Monday to take charge of plans for Spring football.

ABANDONED AUTO IS SEARCHED FOR CLEW

HYATTSVILLE, Md., Mar. 3.—The operator of a service station here reported to police today a man, accompanied by a woman and a baby, drove into his station early Wednesday—the morning following the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby in New Jersey—and left his car for one day's parking.

Today the man, who gave his name as A. C. Lentz, had not called for his machine. The garage man recalled the Lindbergh case and notified Washington, D. C. detectives.

The machine bore Pennsylvania license tags AC135.

Search of the automobile revealed some road maps of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and other states, and a letter addressed to Lentz from a credit company. It was addressed to Lentz at No. 94 Bryan Ave., Minneapolis.

Police stationed a guard on the machine to await the owner's return.

PITCHER STABBED

With deep knife wounds in his chest Ed Morris, Boston Red Sox hurler, battles for his life in a hospital at Century, Fla. LINDBERGH AVOIDS REST UNDER STRAIN OF KIDNAPING CASE

John Toohy, secretary to his excellency the governor of New Jersey, fresh rumors came to torture already overstrained nerves. Toohy patiently disproved every one. Midnight passed and sleep seemed the most wonderful thing in the world. But just as there was no sleep for that tortured couple in the white house on the hill so there was no sleep for the men who were brought here to inform the world the whys and the wherefore of the crime.

All eyes were glued on the phone which reposed so innocently on John Toohy's desk.

Every ring of it would result in a strained tension. But as the night wore on and the chill of the early morning crept into the room one despaired of ever hearing news that would send an army of men rushing to typewriters and telephones. The mystery remained as baffling as ever.

An early morning trip to the barren country where the aviator built a house that was intended never to harbor unhappiness resulted in a glimpse of the harassed father out on the back terrace for a breath of air. His shoulders were stooped and it seemed he had aged twenty years in as many hours.

He was no longer the proud lone eagle.

He was a hapless husband, bewildered and hurt that such cruelty could be practiced upon him.

Meanwhile, the white house on the hill, quite proud of itself splashed in the sunshine, made a strange contrast to the mood of its master.

Three different photographs of the Lindbergh baby were televised, marking the first time that this latest modern marvel was used in a man hunt.

Broadcasting stations also carried the appeal of Mrs. Lindbergh, transmitted by Governor Moore of New Jersey, that whoever has the baby protect him against ill health.

A special diet to which Charles Augustus Jr. is accustomed was given over the air for the guide of the kidnappers in feeding him.

A special fleet of airplanes flew over the Lindbergh home and experts made aerial photographs of the whole region surrounding the dwelling.

completely routed, although their situation was desperate.

However they refused, declaring they had no authority from the central government.

It was believed the Japanese intended to maintain their forces in Shanghai for a while in order to defend their positions. The order to cease military operations was interpreted by observers as an order to halt offensives and not an indication that troops would be withdrawn immediately.

The Japanese were understood to be under orders to fight if fired upon.

Chapel, deserted, was being swept with terrific flames which devoured all as they spread over large sections. This Chinese quarter of Shanghai saw action during every day and night of the month's encounter and the cessation of hostilities found it a mass of ruins.

Today's fires were the result of Japanese attacks yesterday behind the Chinese retreat. They raged unchecked.

GENEVA, Mar. 3.—W. W. Yen, Chinese delegate to the League of Nations council, formally accepted the British armistice proposal today for a "mutual and simultaneous evacuation" of Shanghai as the extraordinary assembly of the League began its discussion of the Sino-Japanese disputes.

This was the proposal tentatively arranged between Chinese and Japanese representatives aboard the British flagship of Admiral Kelly at Shanghai. In accepting the proposal China recognizes the need for the safety of the international settlement, Yen said.

NATION JOINS HUNT FOR MISSING BABE; GOVERNMENT HELPS

city by train or tube or ferry or automobile were carefully scrutinized. "Baby farms," hotels, lodging houses, were visited by searchers in the hope of unearthing some new clew to the Lindbergh baby.

Airplanes circled aloft over wide areas of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other states, often with famous pilots at the controls who hoped to spot some suspicious looking car or an isolated "hide-away" which might harbor the abductors and the world's most famous child.

Major Frank M. Nicholas, commander of state police in Connecticut, ordered every man out of barracks and on duty in the hunt. Similar action was taken by Major John A. Warner, superintendent of New York State police, at Albany.

Throughout New England, the roads from New York were placed under specially heavy guards.

Virginia, South Carolina, Ohio, Indiana and other Southern and Middle Western states enlisted in the effort to capture the kidnapper. In many places, the American Legion instructed its posts to help.

For the first time, a New York radio station kept open all night broadcasting latest developments in the case which has stirred the entire nation as no other modern occurrence except perhaps the news of the armistice ending the world war.

XENIA AND GREENE COUNTY OBITUARY, FUNERAL NOTICES

MRS. ELIZABETH ALLEN
Mrs. Elizabeth Swope Allen, 90, former Xenian, died at her home in Santa Ana, Calif., Sunday evening according to word received by relatives here. Death was caused by infirmities of age.

Mrs. Allen was the widow of John D. Allen, who was born in the Hawkins neighborhood and conducted a shoe store here on E. Main St. many years. Mr. and Mrs. Allen moved to California in 1889 and Mr. Allen died ten years ago.

Funeral services and burial took place in Santa Ana.

MRS. CLARISSA MURPHY
Mrs. Clarissa E. Murphy, 80, widow of William A. Murphy and life-long resident of Greene County died at her home in the Zoar neighborhood, nine miles south of Xenia, Wednesday night at 11:20. She had been suffering from heart trouble and had been in a serious condition only a short time before her death.

Mrs. Murphy was born in New Jasper Twp., May 30, 1851 and was married to William A. Murphy September 16, 1874. He died December 22, 1911. Mrs. Murphy is survived by an adopted son, Charles S. Murphy, at home; and the following brothers and sisters:

William Mussetter, near Paintersville; Joseph Mussetter, Havana, Ill.; Basil Mussetter, Long Beach, Calif.; Mrs. Ida M. Bullard, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Charles Pierson, Archer, Fla.; and Mrs. Emily J. Wolfe, of Canada. A number of nieces and nephews also survive.

Brief funeral services will be held at the home Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in charge of the Rev. John Kilmer, pastor of the New Burlington M. E. Church circuit, followed by services at Zoar M. E. Church at 10:30 o'clock. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

Kidnaping Add Sad Chapter To Lindbergh Saga As Told In Pictures

The Lindbergh saga began May 20, 1927, when Charles Lindbergh, in his monoplane rose from Roosevelt Field on his memorable transatlantic flight. In the fog and darkness the Lindbergh trail was blazed and he arrived in Paris May 21 to be greeted by Ambassador Herrick while the world cheered. Entertained by royalty throughout Europe, Lindbergh returned to the U. S. President Coolidge decorated him. Then he flew to Mexico City. It was there Lindbergh met Anne Morrow, daughter of the U. S. ambassador. They were wed in May, 1929, and honeymooned in a motorboat off New England. After their marriage Anne flew with Lindy often. One flight was over Central America where they sighted an unknown Mayan city. On April 21, 1930, they completed a record flight from California to New York in 14 hours 23 minutes. Two months and two days later the Lindbergh heir was born in Englewood, N. J. He was christened, Charles Augustus, Jr. The Lindberghs remained in seclusion for awhile, then flew to the Orient where the plane was damaged in a crash on the Yangtze River. Back in the U. S. they moved into their new home in Hopewell, N. J. It was here the baby was stolen from his crib at night.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh and her husband "Slim" waited for word from the kidnapers. All the lights in the Lindbergh house were kept burning. Three automobiles were held waiting outside in readiness to go anywhere the kidnapers might order.

ESTATE IS CLEARED
The area for almost two square miles around the estate was cleared of automobiles. Newspapermen were requested by the colonel to temporarily leave the estate.

"Please go," pleaded the colonel. "It is important and don't embarrass me by asking me why." The whole world waited and prayed with the Lindberghs for the safe return of the baby. The whole nation worked with them in the greatest organized hunt in the annals of American criminology.

Local and state police, the department of justice, customs officials and even the coast guard cooperated in the search for the first baby of the land.

WELL INFORMED
State police are convinced that the kidnaping was carefully planned and that the leader knew the habits of the Lindberghs, the topography of the estate and the construction of the house.

He probably knew....

That the baby was put to bed each night at 7 p. m.

That Colonel Lindbergh on Tuesday was supposed to attend a dinner in New York.

That the ladder used would reach exactly to the nursery on the second story.

That the baby was fed at 10 p. m. and that the kidnaping would be discovered by that time. It turned out that Colonel Lindbergh did not go to the dinner in New York because he was confused as to its date. He and Mrs. Lindbergh were in the dining room during the kidnaping. The dining room is at the other end of the house from the nursery.

DARING ABDUCTION
The daring of the baby-raid was emphasized by the discovery that the kidnapers in climbing up to the second-story window had to place his ladder in front of a window of the library on the ground floor.

The home-made ladder used by the kidnapers may turn out to prove one of the most important clues in the case. Each of its three sections is seven feet long. They are made of new southern white pine. The bottom section had the steps nailed on the uprights as if its user had found that the first two sections did not reach the window and had made an addition.

As Mrs. Lindbergh tucked in her child before the kidnaping, she attempted to close the shutter on the child's bedroom window. It was out-of-order and would not close.

Police expected a theory that the kidnapers may have visited the nursery earlier and deliberately damaged the shutter.

Samuel Mandel, whose stolen car was found abandoned at Hillside, N. J., was questioned by Brooklyn police at the request of state troopers here.

Mandel told police the car was stolen Tuesday afternoon while parked in Brooklyn. He said he was willing to do anything to help the search for the missing baby.

Fingerprints found in the stolen automobile were being studied by experts.

ANNE LINDBERGH FINDS CONSOLATION

woman whose heart is heavy as lead. For her there is not the consolation of poetry. For her there may be prayer, and feverish activity—sewing, washing, pressing—the duties of a nurse.

Nothing can quiet the ache in Betty Gow's breast except the return of little Charlie.

The position of a baby's nurse in the Lindbergh family is an important one. She has complete charge, complete responsibility. Usually this creates a very real affection for the child.

Betty Gow was no exception to that rule. She had been with Charlie since shortly after his birth, seen him change from a wizened little creature with a shock of straight black hair to a round and dimply golden head, the image—they say—of his father.

The nurse is at a point near collapse, it is said, sitting in that house in the middle of the woods, wondering when she will see "her" boy again.

GREAT WORLD-WIDE INTEREST IN KIDNAPING OF LINDBERGH BABY

Newspapermen and photographers swamped the Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J., when word of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping was flashed throughout the world. At left a view of the house taken after the crime was discovered and below, reporters interviewing members of the household. At right, a state trooper questions one of the many motorists in the vicinity who were stopped, and below, a detective is shown examining the three-section ladder used to remove the child from his nursery on the second floor.

Kidnaping Add Sad Chapter To Lindbergh Saga As Told In Pictures

The Lindbergh saga began May 20, 1927, when Charles Lindbergh, in his monoplane rose from Roosevelt Field on his memorable transatlantic flight.

In the fog and darkness the Lindbergh trail was blazed and he arrived in Paris May 21 to be greeted by Ambassador Herrick while the world cheered.

Entertained by royalty throughout Europe, Lindbergh returned to the U. S. President Coolidge decorated him. Then he flew to Mexico City.

It was there Lindbergh met Anne Morrow, daughter of the U. S. ambassador. They were wed in May, 1929, and honeymooned in a motorboat off New England.

After their marriage Anne flew with Lindy often. One flight was over Central America where they sighted an unknown Mayan city.

On April 21, 1930, they completed a record flight from California to New York in 14 hours 23 minutes.

Two months and two days later the Lindbergh heir was born in Englewood, N. J. He was christened Charles Augustus, Jr.

The Lindberghs remained in seclusion for awhile, then flew to the Orient where the plane was damaged in a crash on the Yangtze River.

Back in the U. S. they moved into their new home in Hopewell, N. J. It was here the baby was stolen from his crib at night.

TO MEET KIDNAPERS' DEMANDS; IDENTIFY PHOTOS OF SUSPECTS

Anne Morrow Lindbergh and her husband "Slim" waited for word from the kidnapers.

All the lights in the Lindbergh house were kept burning. Three automobiles were held waiting outside in readiness to go anywhere the kidnapers might order.

ESTATE IS CLEARED

The area for almost two square miles around the estate was cleared of automobiles. Newspapermen were requested by the colonel to temporarily leave the estate.

"Please go," pleaded the colonel. "It is important and don't embarrass me by asking me why."

The whole world waited and prayed with the Lindberghs for the safe return of the baby. The whole nation worked with them in the greatest organized hunt in the annals of American criminology.

Local and state police, the department of justice, customs officials and even the coast guard cooperated in the search for the first baby of the land.

WELL INFORMED

State police are convinced that the kidnaping was carefully planned and that the leader knew the habits of the Lindberghs, the topography of the estate and the construction of the house.

He probably knew....

That the baby was put to bed each night at 7 p. m.

That Colonel Lindbergh on Tuesday was supposed to attend a dinner in New York.

That the ladder used would reach exactly to the nursery on the second story.

That the baby was fed at 10 p. m. and that the kidnaping would be discovered by that time.

It turned out that Colonel Lindbergh did not go to the dinner in New York because he was confused as to its date. He and Mrs. Lindbergh were in the dining room during the kidnaping. The dining room is at the other end of the house from the nursery.

DARING ABDUCTION

The daring of the baby-raid was emphasized by the discovery that the kidnapers in climbing up to the second-story window had to place his ladder in front of a window of the library on the ground floor.

The home-made ladder used by the kidnapers may turn out to prove one of the most important clues in the case. Each of its three sections is seven feet long. They are made of new southern white pine.

The bottom section had the steps nailed on the uprights as if its user had found that the first two sections did not reach the window and had made an addition.

As Mrs. Lindbergh tucked in her child before the kidnaping, she attempted to close the shutter on the child's bedroom window. It was out-of-order and would not close.

Police expected a theory that the kidnapers may have visited the nursery earlier and deliberately damaged the shutter.

Samuel Mandel, whose stolen car was found abandoned at Hillside, N. J., was questioned by Brooklyn police at the request of state troopers here.

Mandel told police the car was stolen Tuesday afternoon while parked in Brooklyn. He said he was willing to do anything to help the search for the missing baby.

Fingerprints found in the stolen automobile were being studied by experts.

ANNE LINDBERGH FINDS CONSOLATION

woman whose heart is heavy as lead. For her there is not the consolation of poetry. For her there may be prayer, and feverish activity—sewing, washing, pressing—the duties of a nurse.

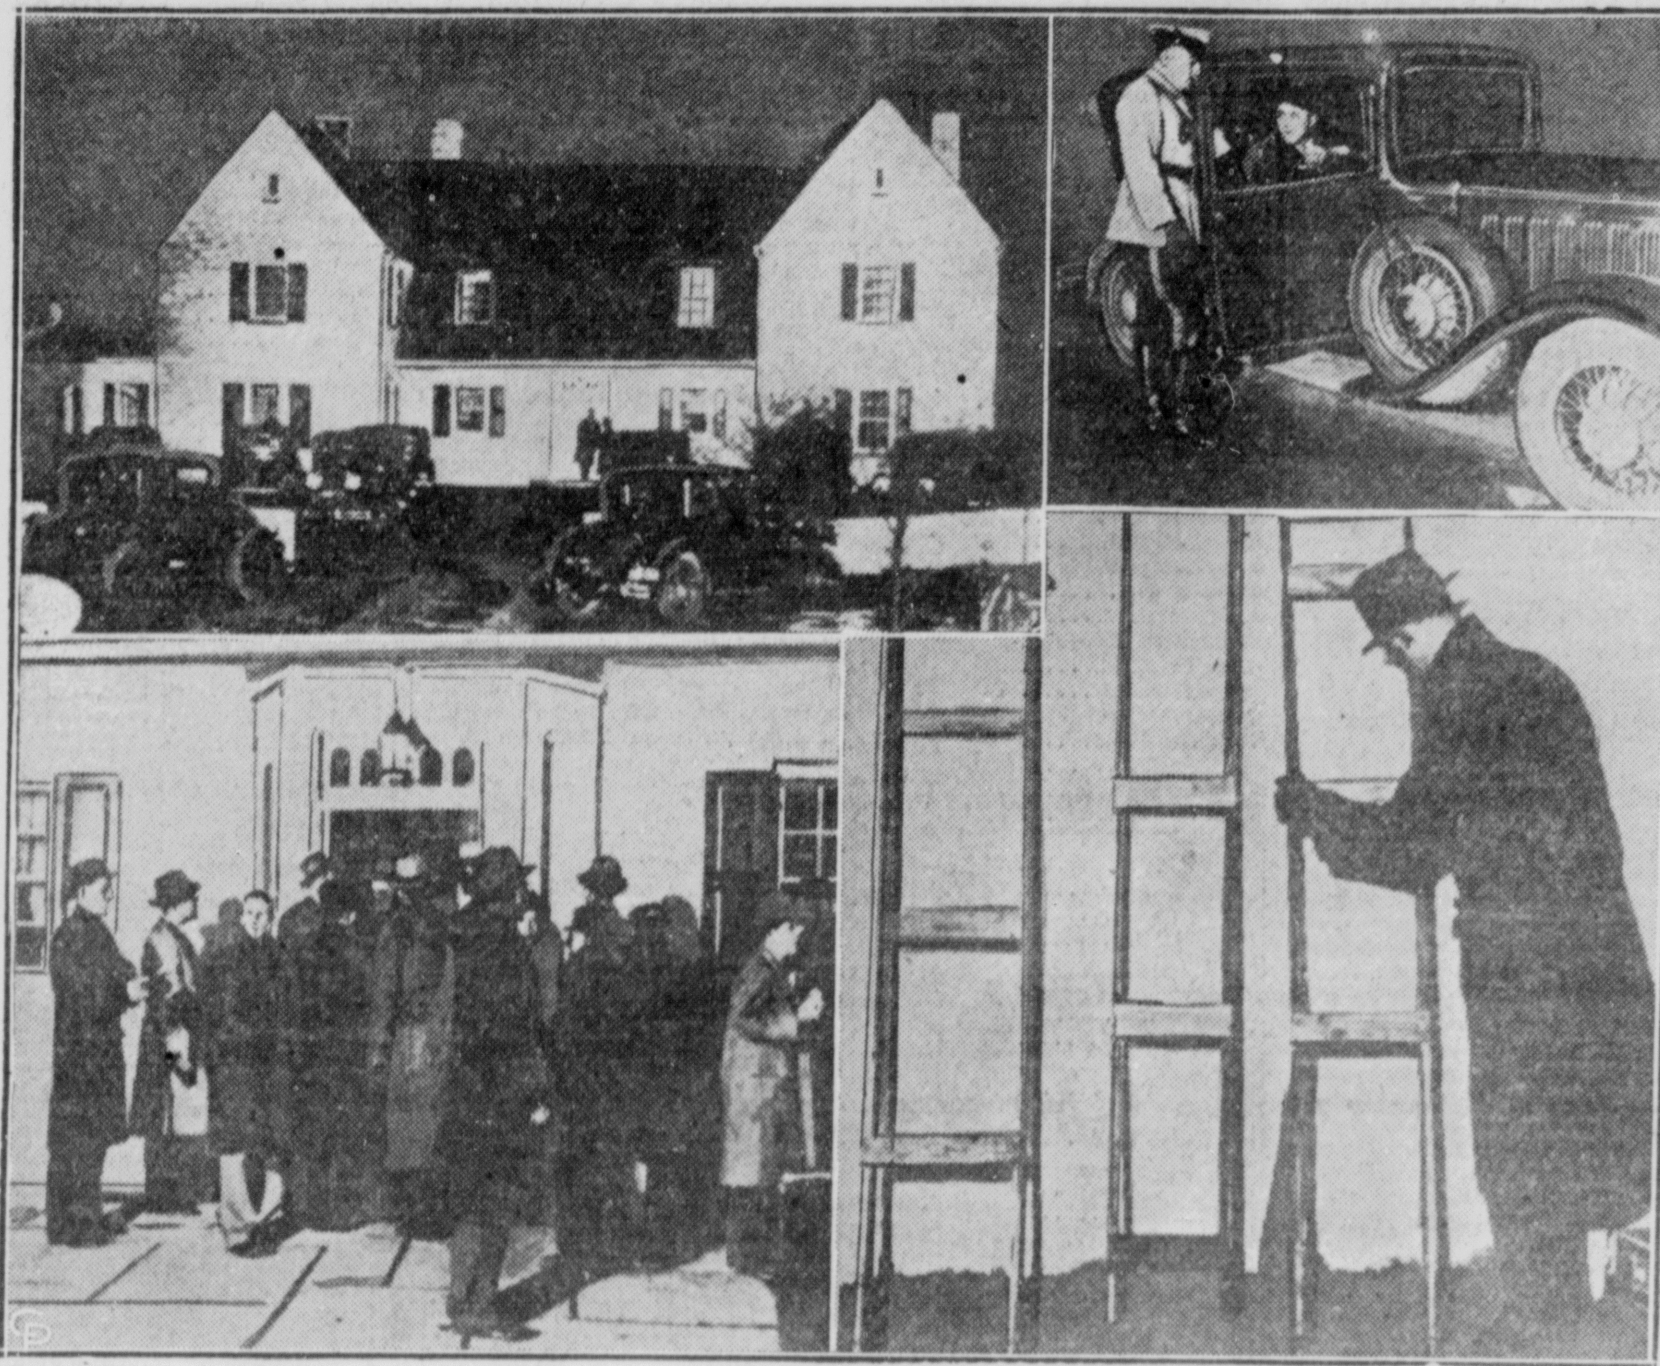

Nothing can quiet the ache in Betty Gow's breast except the return of little Charlie.

The position of a baby's nurse in the Lindbergh family is an important one. She has complete charge, complete responsibility. Usually this creates a very real affection for the child.

Betty Gow was no exception to that rule. She had been with Charlie since shortly after his birth, seen him change from a wizened little creature with a shock of straight black hair to a round and dimpled golden head, the image—they say—of his father.

The nurse is at a point near collapse. It is said, sitting in that house in the middle of the woods, wondering when she will see "her" boy again.

GREAT WORLD-WIDE INTEREST IN KIDNAPING OF LINDBERGH BABY

Newspapermen and photographers swamped the Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J., when word of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping was flashed throughout the world. At left a view of the house taken after the crime was discovered and below, reporters interviewing members of the household.

At right, a state trooper questions one of the many motorists in the vicinity who were stopped, and below, a detective is shown examining the three-section ladder used to remove the child from his nursery on the second floor.

SENSATIONAL CASE RECALLS PREVIOUS KIDNAPING STORIES

NEW YORK, March 3.—Kidnaping of the baby of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh probably is the most sensational crime of modern history next to the assassinations of President Lincoln and President McKinley.

Because the world had been more thrilled by the birth of the famous baby on June 22, 1930 than by the nativity of any other child in generations, the news of his abduction aroused public interest and sympathy everywhere.

Even the famous kidnaping of Charley Ross, 4, of Philadelphia, did not command the same far-spread alarm, though the boy was the object of a nationwide search for years. The mystery of his disappearance was never solved.

The boy, one of a number of children of celebrated parents to be kidnaped in the last century, was the son of a Philadelphia merchant. On July 1, 1874, he was enticed from his Germantown home with his brother, Walter, by two men in a buggy who promised them toys.

After a short ride Walter was dispatched into a store with money given him by the men. When he returned, Charley and the buggy were gone.

Christian K. Ross, the boy's father, cooperated with police which mobilized in the search throughout the continent.

Although many persons at various times claimed to be the missing Ross boy grown to manhood, and despite receipt of a letter by the father of Charley demanding ransom, no clue to his whereabouts ever proved successful.

Great public indignation was roused also by the abduction of Edward Cudahy, son of Edward A. Cudahy, wealthy Omaha meat packer in 1900. The strange circumstances surrounding the case made it one of absorbing interest for years.

The elder Cudahy, shortly after his son was taken from his home, received a letter demanding $25,000 ransom. He paid the money by placing it in a designated spot, and his boy, unharmed, was restored to his home.

There was an echo of the affair a few years later, when Pat Crowe confessed to the abduction. But his trial ended in a verdict of "not guilty," although scores of persons identified him in court as the kidnaper. Crowe afterward turned reformer.

Marian Parker, 12, daughter of a Los Angeles banker, Perry M. Parker, fell victim to a brutal abductor who eventually was convicted of killing the little girl, and hanged.

She was seized by a strange man while on her way home from school one day in 1927. Her father, shortly afterwards, received a note asking $15,000 ransom. The message was signed "The Fox."

Parker met the writer by appointment and paid the money. A few hours later, the mutilated body of his daughter was left at his home.

William Hickman, bank messenger, was executed for the crime.

A dramatic exploit was the kidnaping of 8-year-old Willie Whittla, Sharon, Pa., son of a lawyer, in 1909.

After the father paid $10,000 ransom to an old woman he met by appointment in a store, he was told to meet his boy in Cleveland the next day. Willie, disguised by dark glasses, stepped off a street car at the designated place there.

No trace of the perpetrators of the kidnaping was found.

Many abductions of children in recent years were never solved. Blakeley Coughlin, 4, Morristown, Pa., has been missing since 1920. Nor were traces found of Raimonde Von Maluski, 3, stolen from his New York home in 1925, of Billy Gaffney, 4, Brooklyn, who disappeared in 1927 or of Melvin Horst, 4, Orrville, in 1928.

At least ten abductions of children in the last ten years attracted national attention. In a few instances, the victims were found murdered long after their disappearance. Most of the cases were never unraveled.

SMALL FIRE LOSS

A large truck and trailer, belonging to a Detroit, Mich., firm, were badly damaged when they struck the Caesar Creek bridge on the Wilmington Pike, five miles south of Xenia, between 1 and 2 o'clock Thursday morning. Two men in the truck were said to have been slightly injured but they continued on to Detroit after the accident. Their names were not learned.

YOUR CHILD'S COLD needs attention. Children's Milt Musterole, safe, counter-irritant, applied every hour for 5 hours, should bring complete comfort.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating. Thousands who take Olive Tablets are never cured with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition, pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound, known by their olive color. Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for 2 weeks. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

KIDNAPERS TOOK LINDBERGH BABY FROM HERE

These photos show the first studio picture of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, now 19 months old, and an air view of the $50,000 Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J., scene of the kidnaping of the famous flyer's infant son. The Lindbergh baby is shown in the lap of his great grandmother, Mrs. Chas. Cutter. Right is his mother, the former Anne Morrow, daughter of the late Senator Dwight Morrow, and at left is Mrs. Dwight Morrow.

AUTOIST DRIVES CAR IN DITCH TO AVOID TRAGEDY; CHILD HURT

Deliberately swerving her machine into a ditch in order to avoid running down three small girls walking along the edge of the highway, Miss Juanita M. Rankin, 231 E. Main St., this city, escaped serious injury when the auto upset four miles east of Xenia on the Jamestown Pike at 8 o'clock Wednesday night.

Although the auto plunged six feet down a steep embankment then overturned, the driver suffered only minor bruises about the body, and was able to extricate herself without assistance. She was severely shaken.

Miss Rankin was returning to Xenia from Jamestown. As she approached a bridge spanning a creek, in valley between two hills, another auto approached her from the opposite direction, reportedly traveling at a high rate of speed and keeping in the middle of the highway.

Three small girls, children of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dean, residing nearby, were walking along the north side of the pike, facing westbound traffic.

Faced with the prospect of colliding head-on with the auto or striking the children, Miss Rankin chose, instead, to drive into the ditch.

The three girls, frightened, scattered. Two of them jumped into the ditch where the youngest, Betty Jane, 4, was injured slightly when brushed by either the front bumper or a fender of the overturned car. She had two teeth knocked loose and her upper lip cut. Her sisters, Doris, 15, and Eleanor, 13, were unhurt.

The unidentified driver of the second car, which forced Miss Rankin's machine off the road, drove on without stopping. The license number of the car was not obtained and a description of the auto could not be furnished. Sheriff John Baughn and his chief deputy, Walton Spahr, who were called to the scene.

The mother of the little girls saw the mishap from a window of the Dean residence. Dr. W. T. Ungard, Xenia physician, treated the injured child.

STUDENTS TO PLAY POLITICS

KALAMAZOO, Mich.—A miniature Democratic National Convention with all its oratory, parades, political ballyhoo, and struggle for votes of delegates, is to be held by the students of Kalamazoo College. The students will convene March 19 to ballot. In the meantime they will line up votes, ballyhoo their favorite candidate, and argue over issues and platform planks.

"GARNER FOR PRESIDENT"

PITTSBURGH—Politics is picking up in Pittsburgh. Far in advance of elections and national conventions, auto tags bearing the slogan "Garner for President" have made their appearance here. So have others, declaring "Four per cent beer—Relieve unemployment."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, electric candy, chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blotches. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes three good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Remotest a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Christian K. Ross, the boy's father, cooperated with police which mobilized in the search throughout the continent.

Although many persons at various times claimed to be the missing Ross boy grown to manhood, and despite receipt of a letter by the father of Charley demanding ransom, no clue to his whereabouts ever proved successful.

Great public indignation was roused also by the abduction of Edward Cudahy, son of Edward A. Cudahy, wealthy Omaha meat packer in 1900. The strange circumstances surrounding the case made it one of absorbing interest for years.

The elder Cudahy, shortly after his son was taken from his home, received a letter demanding $25,000 ransom. He paid the money by placing it in a designated spot, and his boy, however, was not restored to his home.

There was an echo of the affair a few years later, when Pat Crowe confessed to the abduction. But his trial ended in a verdict of "not guilty," although scores of persons identified him in court as the kidnaper. Crowe afterward turned reformer.

Marian Parker, 12, daughter of a Los Angeles banker, Perry M. Parker, fell victim to a brutal abductor who eventually was convicted of killing the little girl, and hanged.

She was seized by a strange man while on her way home from school one day in 1927. Her father, shortly afterwards, received a note asking $15,000 ransom. The message was signed "The Fox."

Parker met the writer by appointment and paid the money. A few hours later, the mutilated body of his daughter was left at his home.

William Hickman, bank messenger, was executed for the crime. A dramatic exploit was the kidnaping of 8-year-old Willie Whittle, Sharon, Pa., son of a lawyer, in 1909.

After the father paid $10,000 ransom to an old woman he met by appointment in a store, he was told to meet his boy in Cleveland the next day. Willie, disguised by dark glasses, stepped off a street car at the designated place there.

No trace of the perpetrators of the kidnaping was found.

Many abductions of children in recent years were never solved. Blakeley Coughlin, 4, Morristown, Pa., has been missing since 1920. Nor were traces found of Raymond Von Maluski, 3, stolen from his New York home in 1925, of Billy Gaffney, 4, Brooklyn, who disappeared in 1927 or of Melvin Horst, 4, Orrville, in 1928.

At least ten abductions of children in the last ten years attracted national attention. In a few instances, the victims were found murdered long after their disappearance. Most of the cases were never unraveled.

SMALL FIRE LOSS

A large truck and trailer, belonging to a Detroit, Mich., firm, were badly damaged when they struck the Caesar Creek bridge on the Wilmington Pike, five miles south of Xenia, between 1 and 2 o'clock Thursday morning. Two men in the truck were said to have been slightly injured but they continued on to Detroit after the accident. Their names were not learned.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating. Thousands who take Olive Tablets are never cured with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition, pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound; known by their olive color. Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

KIDNAPERS TOOK LINDBERGH BABY FROM HERE

These photos show the first studio picture of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, now 19 months old, and an air view of the $50,000 Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J., scene of the kidnaping of the famous flyer's infant son. The Lindbergh baby is shown in the lap of his great grandmother, Mrs. Chas. Cutter. Right is his mother, the former Anne Morrow, daughter of the late Senator Dwight Morrow, and at left is Mrs. Dwight Morrow.

AUTOIST DRIVES CAR IN DITCH TO AVOID TRAGEDY; CHILD HURT

Deliberately swerving her machine into a ditch in order to avoid running down three small girls walking along the edge of the highway, Miss Juanita M. Rankin, 231 E. Main St., this city, escaped serious injury when the auto upset four miles east of Xenia on the Jamestown Pike at 8 o'clock Wednesday night.

Although the auto plunged six feet down a steep embankment then overturned, the driver suffered only minor bruises about the body, and was able to extricate herself without assistance. She was severely shaken.

Miss Rankin was returning to Xenia from Jamestown. As she approached a bridge spanning a creek, in valley between two hills, another auto approached her from the opposite direction, reportedly traveling at a high rate of speed and keeping in the middle of the highway.

Three small girls, children of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dean, residing nearby, were walking along the north side of the pike, facing westbound traffic.

Faced with the prospect of colliding headon with the auto or striking the children, Miss Rankin steered her car into the ditch, where it overturned.

The girls were not hurt, but the car was badly damaged.

Police are investigating the case.

chose, instead, to drive into the ditch.

The three girls, frightened, scattered. Two of them jumped into the ditch where the youngest, Betty Jane, 4, was injured slightly when brushed by either the front bumper or a fender of the overturned car. She had two teeth knocked loose and her upper lip cut. Her sisters, Doris, 15, and Eleanor, 13, were unhurt.

The unidentified driver of the second car, which forced Miss Rankin's machine off the road, drove on without stopping. The license number of the car was not obtained and a description of the auto could not be furnished Sheriff John Baughn and his chief deputy, Walton Spahr, who were called to the scene.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rain' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salt, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Remotest a little store, 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Bernie Wisecracks On Air; Music Is Popular

By MILDRED MASON

"Prosperity, if you're listening in, please come home! All is forgiven. This is only one of the many wisecracks Ben Bernie, 'the Old Maestro of Jazz', and popular orchestra director, 'pulls' in his broadcasts.

Born Benjamin Ancel, he was the son of a blacksmith who lived and conducted his shop in the shadow of the Brooklyn Bridge. Bernie studied music at an early age and played before a number of audiences on a vaudeville tour. He failed to move his audiences, however, until he started wisecracking and from then on he was a success.

Immediately after the World War Bernie was seized with an idea for a new type of dance band, with the conductor doing something besides beating the air with a baton. His first engagement with this type of orchestra was at a New York hotel. He was booked for a month but stayed five years. He later played in Hollywood and London and then came to Chicago.

Bernie's phrase, 'I hope you like it' has become a catchword throughout the country. The members of his orchestra who know him best of all, describe him briefly but emphatically—"One swell guy."

To Explain Symphony.

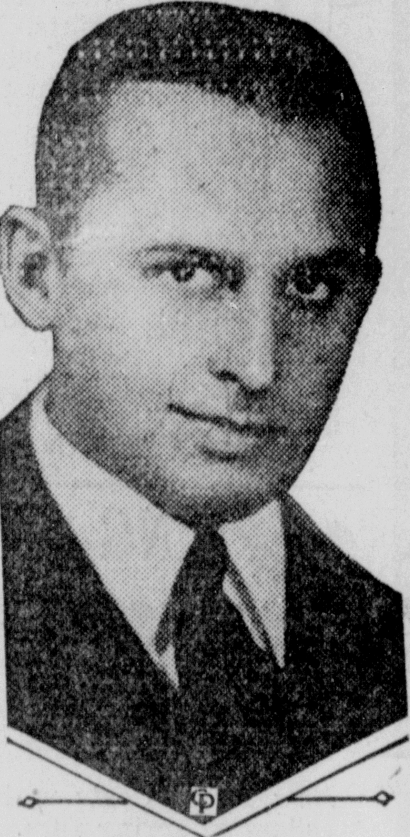

What the symphony means in musical composition will be the theme of Walter Damrosch's talk to a coast-to-coast audience during the NBC Music Appreciation Hour over WLW, Friday at 11 a. m. He will discuss the symphony in the first half of the hour and during the second half will present compositions from Wagner.

Feature Piano Duo.
"Tall Tales," the selection Ben Bernie dedicated to Walter Winchell will open a program featuring two pianos over the Columbia network through WKRC, Cincinnati, Friday from 12 to 12:15 p. m. The two pianists to be heard on the program are Frank Westphal, Chicago's pioneer radio orchestra leader and Albert Nilson.

Present Rostand's Play.
Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" will be presented by the Radio Guild over an NBC-WJZ network Friday at 4:15 p. m. This program is not available through WLW, Cincinnati, but may be heard through WBAL, Baltimore; WHAS, Louisville; WSM, Nashville; WSB, Atlanta; WJR, Detroit; WHAM, Rochester and others.

Inaugurate New Program.
"Today and Yesterday" featuring parallels in current and former events in the history of the United States is the title of a new program to have its premiere over the Columbia network through WKRC, Cincinnati, Friday at 8:30 p. m. The new feature will seek to be as realistic as possible, even imitating famous men's voices. Don Voorhees will direct an orchestra and Miss Gladys Brittain, soprano, will be a feature.

WHAT AUTOS USE
CHICAGO—The automobile industry uses more steel and iron strips, bars and sheeting, malleable iron, rubber, plate glass, nickel and lead than any other industry, according to the Chicago Motor Club.

Wanted—Love! The Story of an Unemployed Girl

READ THIS FIRST:

Lillian Abbott, 18-year-old sub-deb, raised in the severe atmosphere of a New England home, decides she wants a career rather than a social life and answers an ad in a New York paper calling for girls for the movies. Through correspondence she arranges to have Thomas Blane, good looking and worldly wise, who advertised, come to the home of her wealthy parents in Salem, Mass., for a personal interview. She wears her new orange lounging pajamas when he calls. Blane tells her he instructs talented girls for picture careers and she agrees to run away from home, taking with her all her savings. They arrange to meet the next day on the train. On the train to New York Blane admires her, telling her that she is "too pretty to work." Lillian dreams of the thrill of going about New York with such a man. In the diner he discovers that he has lost a $20 bill and she gives him money to pay for their luncheon.

CHAPTER 5

The train would soon be in Grand Central station.

Every time Lillian thought of it she felt something catch at her heart. It really was exciting. It was thrilling. It was going to be the best fun she had ever imagined—being in New York on a glorious snow spattered afternoon with this tall, handsome, talkative fellow—Thomas Blane.

They were back in the parlor car now, and Lillian was watching the dusty tenebrous glide by. She always thought of New York as glittering. All lights, and froth and mad music. Of nothing but town cars, bright-colored taxi cabs and smiling traffic policemen. Of nothing but smartly dressed women with stilted heels and slender bodies, tripping along upper Fifth Avenue—looking so different from those she saw walking past the shops in Salem!

She never had seen women even on Tremont street in Boston looking like those on Fifth Avenue in New York. In New York you never saw a woman without lip-stick, or with low-heeled walking shoes as you did in Boston.

"I love New York!" she said in a low, vibrant voice. She said it as much to herself as she did to Thomas Blane.

"And you're not going to regret coming, are you?" he asked, seeking her eyes.

"Of course, I'm not. Why—I couldn't."

"That's the girl!" Her eyes took him in. Not with a brief glance.

He made an impatient gesture. Maybe the confidence in her look penetrated him and that was not in his scheme.

"You understand now, Lillian. We are going to be friends. You must have faith in me. You must believe in me. I—have great plans for you—and I know you're going to ring the bell."

"Oh, I understand—why, you're going to get me into the movies, and no one will ever know who I really am. You're helping me to do something that I really want to do—you're helping me escape being well—you understand why I've been so unhappy at home, don't you?"

"Yes, yes," a little impatient. "We went into all that pretty thoroughly, didn't we? Not waiting for her to say anything he went on hurriedly. "But I want to be sure you understand. You see, Lillian—I'm not guaranteeing anything I couldn't. It's a chance. But, I believe you can make the grade. I think you have—well, I think you have everything. And, that's why I'm going to give you the chance of your sweet young life—right in old New York!"

"Oh, I understand, all right," she assured him.

A faint smile touched his lips. He smoothed one side of his light mustache with two fingers.

"I understand perfectly what I'm doing," Lillian said. "That's what I wrote to my family when I—"

"What? You wrote what—that did you write?" he asked, excitedly.

"Oh, nothing—nothing that would matter—"

"Why in h—why in the name of goodness did you have to write anything! I told you not to tell a soul that you were going—didn't I tell you that yesterday?"

Temper showed in his eyes. They gleamed. His brows pushed a line between them. Even his well-combed hair seemed to bristle to punctuate his quick words.

Lillian's voice was trembling. She mumbled.

"What did you write? Tell me—quickly!"

"I just wrote a little note—a little one, I—just said—"

In her excitement she couldn't remember just what she had said.

"Did you say where you were going? Answer me!"

"I—"

"What did you write? Tell me quickly."

cused himself and left her alone in the parlor car.

"No, no, no, I didn't—I'm positive, Mr. Blane," making an effort to get control of herself.

"Can't you remember what you wrote—what did you say?"

"Wait, just a minute—I'll remember, I'll tell you all of the note..." She put her fingers to her temples and pressed them there. She took her eyes from him. He sat looking at her, as if he was electrified, as if he were waiting for some lever to be pulled and he would jump—at her.

Lillian remembered. She said: "I just said: 'Don't try to find me. I am going away. Don't work. I have enough money to take care of me until I find a job. I've sent my clothes on ahead. You can not trace them through the post office because I sent them to another name in care of another post office in another town—'" She paused trying to remember the rest.

"Yes—that's not all you said, is it?" he said, impatiently.

"No—wait, I'll remember," she closed her eyes a second, tightly. "Then I said—I know what I'm doing. No, that wasn't it. I said: 'I understand perfectly what I'm doing. I'm leaving here. I'm going out on my own.'"

She opened her eyes and looked at him. He asked, anxiously: "What else?"

"That's all—that's every word I wrote—honestly, Mr. Blane."

"Sure you didn't tell them any more than that?" he asked, but she could see he was relieved somewhat by her revelation.

"Oh, I'm positive," she answered, anxiety in her tone. "You—you do believe me, don't you? Please, Mr. Blane."

He forced a smile and pushed himself back in his chair, pretending an ease which he did not feel.

Her blue-black eyes glistened.

Who's Who in Washington

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

PAUL J. KVALE

Having originally been elected to succeed his father, Congressman O. J. Kvale, who died in office, Congressman Paul J. Kvale, of Minnesota, the Farmer-Laborites' lone spokesman in the house of representatives, always is referred to as "young" Congressman Kvale—pronounced Kwally.

He is, in fact, past 35.

"Young" Congressman Kvale had a remarkable education to fit him for public life. His father was a Lutheran clergyman and one of the finest specimens of a political liberal who ever represented a district in Washington.

The result is a peculiar combination of an idealist and an extremely practical, resolute man of action. He looks the latter.

In appearance he would pass for a bank cashier, being too young for a president. In the accuracy of his size-ups of legislative situations the coldest blooded "old guardsmen" take off their hats to him. It happens, however, that he is playing the opposite side of the table from theirs. They know it.

While sure enough of himself as a liberal, for some reason or other he distrusts his judgment as a politician, and always left questions of political strategy to his son, who thus got his theories from a teacher of exceptional ability and his practice in the hard school of experience.

Bernie Wisecracks On Air; Music Is Popular

By MILDRED MASON
"Prosperity, if you're listening in, please come home! All is forgiven." This is only one of the many wisecracks Ben Bernie, "the Old Maestro of Jazz," and popular orchestra director, "pulls" in his broadcasts.

Born Benjamin Ancel, he was the son of a blacksmith who lived and conducted his shop in the shadow of the Brooklyn Bridge. Bernie studied music at an early age and before a number of audiences on a vaudeville tour. He failed to move his audiences, however, until he started wisecracking and from then on he was a success.

Immediately after the World War Bernie was seized with an idea for a new type of dance band, with the conductor doing something besides beating the air with a baton. His first engagement with this type of orchestra was at a New York hotel. He was booked for a month but stayed five years. He later played in Hollywood and London and then came to Chicago.

Bernie's phrase, "I hope you like it" has become a catchword throughout the country. The members of his orchestra who know him best of all, describe him briefly but emphatically—"One swell guy."

To Explain Symphony.
What the symphony means in musical composition will be the theme of Walter Damrosch's talk to a coast-to-coast audience during the NBC Music Appreciation Hour over WLW, Friday at 11 a. m. He will discuss the symphony in the first half of the hour and during the second half will present compositions from Wagner.

Feature Piano Duo.
"Tall Tales," the selection Ben Bernie dedicated to Walter Winchell will open a program featuring two pianos over the Columbia network through WKRC, Cincinnati, Friday from 12 to 12:15 p. m. The two pianists to be heard on the program are Frank Westphal, Chicago's pioneer radio orchestra leader and Albert Nilsson.

Present Rostand's Play.
Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" will be presented by the Radio Guild over an NBC-WJZ network Friday at 4:15 p. m. This program is not available through WLW, Cincinnati, but may be heard through WBAL, Baltimore; WHAS, Louisville; WSM, Nashville; WSB, Atlanta; WJR, Detroit; WHAM, Rochester and others.

Inaugurate New Program.
"Today and Yesterday" featuring parallels in current and former events in the history of the United States is the title of a new program to have its premiere over the Columbia network through WKRC, Cincinnati, Friday at 8:30 p. m. The new feature will seek to be as realistic as possible, even imitating famous men's voices. Don Voorhees will direct an orchestra and Miss Gladys Brittain, soprano, will be a feature.

WHAT AUTOS USE
CHICAGO—The automobile industry uses more steel and iron strips, bars and sheeting, malleable iron, rubber, plate glass, nickel and lead than any other industry, according to the Chicago Motor Club.

Mary Boland Of Stage, Plays In Current Rage

Mrs. Meshbeshier wants to pep up the show her husband is backing so she suggests putting sex into it. "Do you think we can copyright the idea?" says she.

That's the way they carry on right through "Face the Music," Broadway's second satirical musical comedy hit of the season. There's also lots of laughing over the depression and Hal Reisman, the big shot producer who eats with the social register in the automat says: "One more season like this one and we'll be right back to the magic lantern."

Mary Boland makes a brilliant debut in musical comedy as Mrs. Meshbeshier, Irving Berlin wrote the tune. Sam H. Harris was the producer and George S. Kaufman directed the book. There is a dazzling ing rhinestone scene which starts out as a spectacle and ends up as a burlesque when pigeons studded with rhinestones flutter from the wings. And Mrs. Meshbeshier remarks, anent rhinestones, that she once had an operation for them.

Hugh O'Connell, Joseph Macaulay, J. Harold Murray and Catherine Carrington are swell. And there is Berlin's song, "Let's Have Another Cup of Coffee."

Time was when Christine Hill, famous character comedienne, wore diamonds and emeralds and pearls of an East Indian prince. That was back in the days of "big-time" vaudeville and "stock," when she commanded the homage, not only of Subba Adhi Bhagat, Maharajah of Nepal, India, but thousands of theater fans as well.

Once she stopped the show with her portrayal of the Italian peasant woman, "Angela," in her own vaudeville sketch, "Fate," dubbed by critics "The Perfect Illusion." Today Christine Hill, broken, old and poor, faces not only oblivion but loss of her home. She made her debut in 1892 in Los Angeles in the melodrama, "The Shadows of a Great City" as an ingenue. She gave up the stage when, late in life she married W. H. Dorrance, Okla-

Mary Boland Of Stage, Plays In Current Rage

Mrs. Meshbeshier wants to pep up the show her husband is backing so she suggests putting sex into it. "Do you think we can copyright the idea?" says she.

That's the way they carry on right through "Face the Music," Broadway's second satirical musical comedy hit of the season. There's also lots of laughing over the depression and Hal Reisman, the big shot producer who eats with the social register in the automat says: "One more season like this one and we'll be right back to the magic lantern."

Mary Boland makes a brilliant debut in musical comedy as Mrs. Meshbeshier, Irving Berlin wrote the tune, Sam H. Harris was the producer and George S. Kaufman directed the book. There is a dazzling

Twenty Years '12-Ago-'32

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Davidson left Wednesday for a western trip.

An average of five times as many people get on and off the Pennsylvania Railroad trains at Xenia as at any other station between Cincinnati and Columbus, a survey has shown.

Another run from R. D. Williamson's flock of American Merinos was sold this week for export to South America.

Two Xenians made an auto trip to Toledo in ten hours, and they encountered several places where the road was cut through a solid wall of snow five or six feet deep.

PRECIPITATION IN FEBRUARY IS LIGHT SAYS WEATHERMAN

Greene County was short-changed again, as far as snowfall was concerned, during February, and the total rainfall measured only 1.11 inches, according to the monthly report of Weatherman Ernest L. Harner, of the Xenia observatory.

Temperatures ranged from a minimum of 17 degrees on the first day of February to a maximum of 73 degrees on February 10.

Sufficient rainfall to be measured occurred on six days in February. Thirteen days were clear, thirteen cloudy and three were partly cloudy. Maximum and minimum temperature readings for each day of the month follow:

VETERANS TO MEET THURSDAY EVENING

Organization of a local chapter of the Disabled American War Veterans of the World War, Inc., will be effected at a meeting at the Court House Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, instead of Friday evening as previously announced. Separate charters will be granted the white and colored groups it is announced by Earl H. Crowe, Springfield, national organizer and junior commander of the state department organization, who is here making arrangements for the organization.

Mr. Crowe will speak at the meeting and will discuss compensation and the new law for disability allowances. Officers for the two groups will be appointed by Mr. Crowe. Any ex-service men of the World War who were wounded, gassed, injured or disabled in any way during active service are eligible for membership and it is urged that they attend the meeting.

TWO OF FEW PHOTOS TAKEN OF LINDBERGH BABY

These pictures of Chas. A. Lindbergh, Jr., 19-months-old son of the world's most famous flyer, kidnapped from his crib in the nursery of his home near Hopewell, N. J., are among the very few photos ever taken of the infant. He is shown in his crib, his first picture, and with his mother, the former Anne Morrow. Below an excellent picture of his parents.

his first two-year term as sheriff of Greene County, who will seek re-nomination on the Republican ticket at the May 10 primary election. No other Republican candidate for sheriff has announced, but at least two are expected to seek the Democratic nomination.

SECOND U. S. WELDERY
CLEVELAND—The second weldery in the United States has been placed in operation at a plant here. Company officials explained that a weldery is a factory which turns out welded products just like a foundry turns out castings.

XENIAN APPOINTED TO SCHOOL COUNCIL

William L. Wead, junior in the college of medicine, Ohio State University, Columbus, and son of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Wead, N. Detroit St., has recently been appointed a member of the medical council of the college, a board newly developed which is intended to function between the faculty and the student body of the medical school.

Lectures and other forms of enlightenment will be sponsored through this council, it is said.
